PRINCIPALS IN "TRIANGLE"

LIVING IN 'PERFECT HARMONY'

Derby, Ct., May 16.—"Meet my wives. They're more like pals. They're not only my best friends, but my most severe critics."

Thus Roy Cummings, acrobatic comedian, will introduce you to the Mesdames Cummings—two of 'em—count 'em—two. Each one is his better half. With two better halves Mr. Cummings alleges he really has but one wife, and Mrs. Grundy can go hang.

On the bank of the wood-rimmed Housatonic stands the pretty little Cummings bungalow.

There's a living room with red brick floor and a large chimney, two pink bedrooms, twin beds in each and a third bedroom with a day bed and couch.

There's not the slightest discord. No. 2 wife cooks luncheon, No. 1 wife dinner. Cummings has to get his own breakfast. No. 2 swaps clothes with No. 1. Roy's daughter Edna, five years old, calls both wives "Mama."

It is a happy arrangement. All three live together in perfect peace and harmony. The arrangement re-

BROCKTON STRIKERS QUIT UNION

Brockton, May 16.—Dressers & Packers' Union, whose charter was revoked yesterday by the Boot & Shoe Workers' Union on the ground of violation of working agreement by striking, voted at a wildly enthusiastic meeting today to secede from the B. & S. W. U.

Members of the seceding local are nearly all women and girls. Leaders announced that the vote was practically unanimous.

As further demonstration of revolt the seceders tore their due books of the B. & S. W. U. into shreds and tossed the fragments away.

They voted to form an independent union of their own. Money to hire new headquarters was raised by subscription.

The members of Dressers and Packers' Union, which includes about 900, voted to strike because the State Board of Arbitration handed down a decision granting them 10 per cent. wage increase instead of the 20 per cent. which was sought. The union also voted, when the strike vote was passed, to refuse to accept the State Board any longer as an arbiter in wage or working disputes.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF BRIDE

Husband Vows Vengeance on Person Who Furnished Poison to Roxbury Wife

Retribution stalks the trail of the person responsible for the death of Mrs. Florence Blanchard Langway, secret bride—the victim of poison.

While the medical examiner today was arranging for an autopsy Sergeant Alexander Langway, her husband, vowed vengeance.

"If I find who is guilty I will not ask the law to punish, I will use my own law," he said and he clenched his hands suggestively.

The police, meanwhile, are trying to find whether the girl wife died from poison whiskey or some other

GEORGE JAY GOULD DIES IN FRANCE

Financier Succumbs After a Long Illness; Excelled His Father as Rail Builder

By the Associated Press.

Montone, France, May 17.—George Jay Gould, the American financier, who has been ill here for some time, died at 3 o'clock this morning. He was fifty-nine years old.

The end came peacefully. Mr Gould's wife and two children were at his bedside.

Mr. Gould was stricken with pneumonia at his villa on March 26. For several days his condition remained critical, but he then rallied and on April 3 was said to be out of danger. Three weeks later, however, he suffered a relapse and on May 3 took a turn for the worse.

George Jay Gould, financier and railroad man, succeeded to the leadership of the famous Gould family

SINCLAIR ARRESTED IN LOS ANGELES I. W. W. DOCK STRIKE

Upton Sinclair.

Los Angeles, May 16.—An attempt by Upton Sinclair, author, to conduct an outdoor meeting at Liberty Hill by reading aloud the preamble of the Constitution of the United States was interrupted by police, who broke up the gathering and escorted Sinclair and three companions in an automobile to a destination unknown today.

The action of the police came as a climax to efforts by Sinclair to obtain a permit to conduct a meeting at Liberty Hill, where assemblies were prohibited since the strike of the marine transport workers' branch of the I. W. W. began.

Although police announced the party would be taken to headquarters and brought to book, a check of the stations in the Los Angeles district today failed to reveal Sinclair or his party in any of them.

WIFE WHOSE ANKLES WERE FENCED NOW SUING FOR $100,000

Betty Inch

New York, May 16.—Mrs. Betty Inch, whose ankles diverted the attention of the jurors hearing an extortion charge against her to such an extent that the presiding justice had a fence built around them, is a plaintiff against Eugene P. Herman, whom she blames for her arrest and indictment. She is asking $100,000 damages in the Supreme Court, plus $15,000 as special damages, consisting of expenses Mrs. Inch was put to in defending herself.

Mrs. Inch was indicted in June, 1918. She was tried in January, 1919, and the jury disagreed. Upon the retrial of the case the jury again disagreed, and the indictment was dismissed.

Three schooners, exceptionally heavily loaded, have cleared this week.

BOYS HUNT MISSING WOMAN

Letters Found in Mrs. Valentine's Handbag Give a Clew to Mystery

Lawrence, May 16.—Searching parties made up of 250 boys from the Lawrence High School and Boy Scouts combed the woods around Merrimack Park and along Dooley's Beach today for the body of Mrs. Thomas S. Valentine, who disappeared last Thursday from the Adams Nervine Hospital, Jamaica Plain.

The searchers were headed by Chief of Police J. W. Beaumont of Methuen and Laurence J. O'Leary, principal of the Lawrence High School. Previous to their start Methuen police dynamited the Merrimack River, but no body came to the surface.

VANISHED MAY 10.

Mrs. Valentine, wife of Thomas S. Valentine, of No. 21 Fern street, this city, was sent to the Adams Nervine Hospital several weeks ago when she became ill. Last Thursday she went out for a walk as she had done daily after arriving at the hospital. She did not return and after several

18-Year-Old Wife, Posing as Visitor, Says She Did It to Aid Husband

The "Girl Raffles" who took $62.50 and a diamond brooch from a teacher's desk in Lynn primary school yesterday was caught today while staging a similar performance at the Washington school in that city.

She told the police she was eighteen-year-old Antoinette Di Muso of No. 66 Crescent street, Swampscott—after she had first given two other addresses.

She pleaded with the police that she was married, that she was an expectant mother.

She clutched at her side and shrieked.

She showed a marriage certificate—but the police express doubts about it.

She begged that they keep the news from her husband and her father.

SAY SHE CONFESSED.

She was identified by Principal Arthur P. Briggs and Miss Marion M. Maguire, teacher in the primary form of poison. Her movements on the night before her death are being carefully checked.

Florence Langway had several drinks of liquor a few hours before she was taken to East Boston Relief Hospital. This may be the cause of her death, still there is indication that she may be the victim of a drug.

The girl collapsed Monday night at the home of Mrs. Mary Maffei of No. 26 Havre street, East Boston, who told the Boston American today about strange dreams Mrs. Langway had that prior to her death.

"When Florence came in I was greatly surprised, for I had not seen her for more than a year and I asked her why she had come.

"She told me she had had dreams three nights running in which she saw herself walking through my house. Because of this she thought she had better visit me."

Mrs. Maffei arrived at her bedside in East Boston Relief Hospital before she passed away.

Mrs. Langway, according to preliminary information gathered by the police, had been suffering from a cold. At Mrs. Maffei's Monday night she complained of feeling ill. She said she had taken two drinks of alcohol before leaving home. She had hardly said this when she collapsed.

Mrs. Maffei declared that the bride was happy in her married life and had told her so. Mrs. Maffei said:

SPOKE OF HAPPINESS.

"Mrs. Langway was visiting me and told me how happy she was.

"I smelled an odor on her breath, but she was not under the influence of liquor. She spoke of a cold and said she had taken something to get rid of it.

"She became ill suddenly. I sent my daughter to call the Relief Hospital. There was a long delay in getting aid.

"Mrs. Langway did not take poison, nor was she intoxicated."

The police are trying to trace the liquor or the medicine of which Mrs. Langway took two drinks, as she told Mrs. Maffei, before leaving her mother's home in Havre street.

Neither Langway nor Mrs. Blanchard could account for the girl's sudden illness and death.

There was a report at first that Mrs. Langway had been strangled by swallowing her upper plate of false teeth. But Mrs. Maffei told the police that, as soon as Mrs. Langway fell to the floor, she extracted the false plate from the sick girl's mouth so there would be no danger of choking.

Pupils Will Love School, Says Edison

New York, May 16. — The day is coming when every child will love his school so much that he will look forward eagerly to classes, but classes where some book will have been replaced by the ever-interesting moving picture, Thomas A. Edison, inventor of the movie, said today.

Called as a witness in the Federal examiner's probe to discover whether a film company is a trust, Edison told the story of the moving picture and predicted its wonderful future.

HUB FEDERAL BANK WINS CUBAN BRANCH

Washington, May 16 (By International News Service).—The State Department has approved plans of the Federal Reserve Board to establish a branch bank in Havana, Cuba, it was learned officially today. The proposal was made by the Boston Federal Reserve Bank, but was opposed by the Federal Reserve Bank at Atlanta contending that Havana was in its district.

hours the police of Boston and other cities and towns were notified.

Yesterday two boys playing in Merrimack Park found a velvet handbag behind a billboard. In the bag were several letters addressed to members of Mrs. Valentine's family including her son at No. 1009 Centre street, Jamaica Plain. The letters, according to the police, were written by Mrs. Valentine.

The police believe the woman had wandered back to Lawrence and missing that she will be found dead somewhere in the park.

She was carrying the handbag when she left the Nervine Hospital. How it came to Merrimack Park, unless carried by her is a puzzle the police are trying to solve.

POLICE HOLD LETTERS.

The police of Methuen are maintaining an air of extreme secrecy concerning the contents of the letters found in the bag. Chief Beaudoin refused point blank to disclose the contents of any of them. He also refused to give the names of the persons to whom the letters were addressed, with the exception of one.

At first the police thought the woman might have either jumped or fallen into the river. But after the river was dynamited today they gave up that idea.

Members of the Valentine family refused to discuss the case other than to admit that the woman is school as the girl who came there yesterday, posed as a school visitor from Swampscott, then walked out with Miss Maguire's money, diamond brooch, railroad tickets and department store credit slips.

The police said that she admitted all this before she was identified by the two teachers.

She told the police that her husband was out of work. But a moment later she said that he went to New York today. Where he obtained funds for a trip to Manhattan she did not explain.

She is a short girl, slender, of brunette type.

A wrist watch and gold ring were found on her. She said she bought them today.

TRAPPED IN SCHOOL.

After the taking of Miss Maguire's property from her desk yesterday by this "visitor" from Swampscott, the police sent warning to the other public school of that city.

It was hardly expected that such a stunt would be tried again today. But at midmorning Mrs. P. Lucille Hawley, principal of the Washington School, was told a girl visitor had come.

It was Antoinette Di Maso, as she now calls herself, with description just fitting the case of the day before.

Mrs. Hawley quickly arranged to let her "visit" the room taught by Miss Grace Lyness. After a brief chat Miss Lyness excused herself and went to the office of the principal, who called the police.

The police say pupils told them later that, while Miss Lyness was out of the room, the "visitor" raised the cover of the teacher's desk, but let it down quickly as Miss Lyness re-entered the room.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH CHINESE ARE HELD UP

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, May 16.—With an unconfirmed report received here today from Lincheng that three of the Chinese captives held by the Chinese had been hurled to death over a precipice as a warning to the authorities, further word of the negotiations for the release of the foreign captives was awaited anxiously.

The murders are regarded as an indication that the bandits intend to enforce their terms.

The period of the ultimatums sent out Sunday by the bandits, granting three days, is believed to have expired.

Dear Sirs:

I am contemplating retiring from basin.. and have about 4000 men's two-pant suits on hand. If I can get one man to buy the entire lot I will make the price very attractive. Several offers have been made to me for parts of my stock, but I am not interested in that way of selling; in fact, I am not sure that I want to go out of business.

I have read in your ads that no lot is "too big or too small" for you "providing the price is right", so I thought you might be interested. If I finally decide to sell, whoever buys the entire lot can practically name his own price.

A Real Army
Lady Rat Catchers
Greatest of All Cows
Multiply Alaska by 1,000

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

IN THIS COUNTRY the men responsible for its safety should pin this short cablegram up where they can see it often:

France has 23,000 men in her military air service.

That is a real army, a real power greater in value for attack and defence than France's 600,000 army men on the ground. That air army, able to destroy London, Liverpool and Manchester in twelve hours, keeps England thoughtful.

IT IS not a dull world as you escape from your little corner and look around, hurriedly. A colony of women in one part of London have solved their living problem, by becoming professional rat catchers in spite of women's ancient horror of rats, dating from days when the cave woman came home to find that cavs rats had eaten her baby.

They catch the rats alive, 25,000 of them a month, and sell them to doctors and others for vivisection for eight cents each.

WHEN THERE is the champion cow, named Agassiziz May Echo. She's interesting, and would be cheap at $100,000. Three hundred dairymen dined with that cow in British Columbia, and drank her health in her own milk, when a pretty girl led her into the dining room at the end of a silk rope.

The five-year-old Holstein, bred and owned by the Canadian government, gave 20,886 pounds of milk, yielding 1,681 pounds of butter in 365 days. Twice her own weight in butter, thirty times her weight in milk. How many men in their line of work could equal that for production? If we could only breed men as we breed cows, but nature won't let us.

THE PRESIDENT is going to Alaska. A good idea. By careful thinking, planning and executing, President Harding could add to Alaska's value 1,000 times its purchase price, which was $8,000,000, and that is what he wants to do.

WILLIAM TUDOR WILKINSON, who collects art and sometimes bets on the races, has just married the beautiful Dolores, of Mr. Ziegfeld's Follies, in Paris. He is not going on any regular honeymoon, he said, because he expects wife to be one long honeymoon, from now on. That's a beautiful optimistic thought.

THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHICAL ASSOCIATION sends an expedition to New Mexico's Chaco Canyon, to dig out and investigate the Pueblo bonito, a prehistoric Indian ruin, which was once an apartment house of nine hundred rooms, with vast courts for religious dances, etc. How many things have come up and gone down in this world, from Luxor to the Chaco Canyon. How many more, buildings and civilizations, will rise and fall, before we really start to manage this earth and ourselves? Fortunately, each age takes its own little passing efforts seriously, and that keeps us going.

WISE GENTLEMEN said a high tariff would keep us from buying goods abroad. And, of course, if we did not buy from Europe, we could not sell to Europe. We have the high tariff, and we are buying from Europe. Importations for March show $402,000,000, or $146,000,000 more than in March a year ago. In fact our March imports were $61,000,000 ahead of exports, and Europe may get back some of her gold.

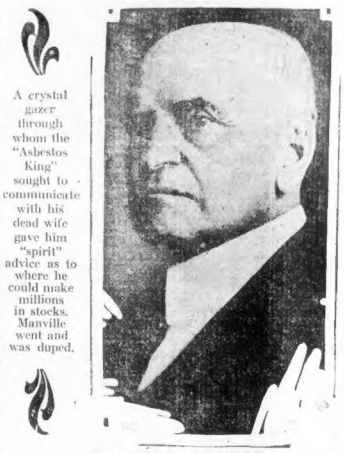
PSYCHIC LURED MANVILLE TO MRS. HAYES



A crystal gazer through whom the "Asbestos King" sought to communicate with his dead wife gave him "spirit" advice as to where he could make millions in stocks. Manville went and was duped.

CHARLES B. MANVILLE

By Universal Service.

New York, May 16.—A Spiritualist medium, garbed as an Oriental, and the familiar crystal ball, started Charles B. Manville, the "Asbestos King," to losing money on fake stocks.

This was revealed today by H. E. Manville, his son.

Following the death of his wife, the elder Manville, who is eighty-five years old, sought to communicate with her.

"Your name is Charles B. Manville," said the medium, looking into the crystal ball. "You are a widower. You have a great name and a great deal of money. Go to see ——— at No. — ——— street and buy stocks he will offer you. Do whatever he tells you. There is millions in it for you."

"PLAYED FOR A SUCKER."

Manville went and, according to his own words, "was played for a sucker."

Among those with whom he became associated was Mrs. Myrtle Bowman Hayes of Boston, who is accused of forging the name of Charles Schwab to one of seventeen notes amounting to $225,000.

Others with whom he came in contact were Mrs. Cora Stetson Butler, Walter H. Clarke, the moving force, it is said, with Mrs. Butler and four others indicted in the $2,000,000 Century Consolidated Oil Company fraud.

Young Manville said today:

"It is evident to me a clever campaign to involve him in questionable transactions was undertaken.

SON TELLS OF FRAUD.

"Of course I had no idea of the extent of the plot. I did not know tons of literature bearing his name was going over the country recommending the purchase of such worthless stock as this oil project and other things.

"If he had a million dollars today it would be gone by the end of the week. Wide use was made of his name and he was treated shamefully. He attached his name to notes when ever he was asked."

To this Manville, Sr., added:

"I have been a sucker for these people. One man took $20,000 from me in this Tex Mex stock. I lost money through another bucketeer, too."

'DRY' LAWS BACKED BY HARDING

President Warns of Trouble From Repeal of State Enforcement Acts

Newburgh, N. Y., May 16.—Repeal of State prohibition enforcement statutes is likely to result in "more or less conflict between State and Federal authorities," in the opinion of President Harding expressed in a letter to Wesley Wait of this city.

Soon after the passage by the New York Legislature of the bill repealing the State enforcement laws, Mr. Wait wrote to the President, urging that Federal officials be prepared to take immediate action in the event Governor Smith should sign the bill. He urged that if the measure is approved, the President convene Congress and that the Governor and the members of the Legislature who voted for the bill be suspended.

CHARGES TREASON.

"Every State official who voted for this bill is subject to the law of treason, having taken an oath to sustain the Constitution of the United States," Mr. Wait's letter said:

The President wrote in reply:

"Pending the approval of the Curtiller bill by Governor Smith this matter is hardly to be regarded as having reached the stage where any Federal authority is called upon for a determination of national policies.

"With much of what you say I am fully in accord. Mr. Lincoln said at the time when slavery was still recognized, established and accepted institution throughout a considerable part of the Union that the nation could not exist half slave and half free.

U. S. HANDICAPPED.

"The government is not equipped with police organizations and judicial establishments adequate to deal with such problems.

"I venture that if by reason of the refusal or failure of any State to discharge its proper duty in such connection, the federal government were lengthy compelled to occupy the territory and jurisdiction of the State and to set up those police and judicial authorities which would be required, the most difficult and trying situations would inevitably arise.

"More or less conflict between State and federal authorities would seem unavoidable in such circumstances. The impression would be created that the federal government was assuming to interfere with the functions of the States, and the distressing results that would ensue readily suggest themselves."

KEEPER OF LOCKUP IS LOCKED UP

Political Feud of the Rockport Police Chief and Jailer Comes to a Head

Rockport, May 16.—Rockport politics got a severe jolt today when Chief of Police John Sullivan arrested Special Officer John Bergstrum, keeper of the town lock-up.

While Bergstrom is charged with destroying personal property and the use of profane language, many profess to see the results of a political feud between the two men.

In Gloucester Court Chief Sullivan said that since his election in April, following defeat the year before, Bergstrom threatened to insure a hot time for Sullivan in office. He tore down an antique calendar which Sullivan valued at $50, Sullivan said.

When Sullivan remonstrated, Bergstrom made slighting remarks about him and his ancestry, he added. A hot battle was waged in court between the two.

Letters Throw Light on Shattered Romance of Beach Tragedy Victim

New York, May 16.—When her dream of love was shattered by the man she loved and she saw him married to another woman, Mary Keith leaped into the ocean at Long Branch.

H. Starr Giddings, prominent lawyer, and son of Professor Franklin Giddings, today told his side of the story after identifying the body, that had been washed up on the beach Monday.

He said he met the girl in Paris that she came here to follow him and that for a while he thought of asking her to marry him. When he became engaged to some one else, the girl threatened to end her life.

She registered at a hotel as Mary King on May 4. Last Monday, after having tried vainly to see Giddings, she went to Long Branch, carrying out her threat.

LETTERS FURNISH CLEW.

Three torn letters were found on the beach. The police have pieced them together.

One of the torn letters when deciphered read:

"Dear Mary: I did not send you the newspaper clippings for any purpose except I thought you might be interested. I am very sorry you have returned the money. It is yours and I want you to have it. Please let me know if you are still at the same address. (several undecipherable words follow). Also please let me know if you have paid the doctor, ——— wants to help you. I hope you will let him. You will then be happier.

"E."

SENT MONEY TO GIRL.

Another letter referred "to your passport" and $150, with the words, "Let me or Mr. Packenthal know when you need the balance."

The third letter, parts of which were undecipherable, read:

"Dear Mary:

"I enclose $20 which I beg you to accept, as I am sure you must be out of funds by now. If you will write me once you are I will send you some more.

"E."

ACCUSED AS KIDNAPER BY GIRL, FREED BY JURY

William J. Allard of Lowell was found not guilty today of attacking Miss Charlotte K. Richardson of North Chelmsford after the jury had deliberated twenty hours. The trial was held before Judge Hammond in Cambridge.

The girl charged Allard overtook her while she was snowshoeing in the country and after a struggle, forced her to accompany him to a rooming house in Lowell.

The girl dropped a note out of a window saying she was being held captive. Two children took the message to the police who made a raid.

Allard was arrested today by officials of Concord Reformatory for violation of his parol.

COURT RULES GRAHAM DIVORCE WAS LEGAL

Washington, May 16.—Augustine L. Humes, a New York lawyer, who married Mrs. Elsa Portner Graham after her divorce at Reno, on Jan. 4, 1919, will not have to prove that his marriage was legal, according to a decree signed by Chief Justice McCoy of the District Supreme Court, dismissing the divorce proceedings begun by Lieutenant Lorimer C. Graham, U. S. N., against his former wife.

The decree is a sequel to a $500,000 alienation suit filed against Humes by Graham. This ended in a verdict for Humes, who was charged with having alienated the affections of Mrs. Graham.

MISTAKE, SAYS DIVA, REPORTED MISSING

By BERT FORD.

"It was just a mistake." Thus did Lydia Lindgren, the "Swedish Nightingale," located in Boston after she mysteriously disappeared from New York with her $11,000 assortment of jewels, dispose of what gave promise of being another case of a broken heart.

"When my husband notified the police that I had mysteriously disappeared it proved his love for me," the grand opera star declared at the office of her Boston attorney. "There was no quarrel. I adore Paul Quizza.

"I was to meet him and we didn't meet. I forgot whether I said Bowling Green or in front of No. 120 Broadway.

MISSED APPOINTMENT.

"I waited at one place and he at the other. I wondered why he did not come. I phoned home. The maid said he was not there. I took the midnight for Boston.

"I had to come to arrange matters as I must sail soon for Europe to fill engagements.

"My husband knew that I had an appointment with my Boston counsel, Attorney Ernest B. Howe, at No. 53 State street, to clear up important business. But he forgot,

HUSBAND HERE TODAY.

"As soon as we heard that he was worried, Attorney Rowe telephoned him and he will be here with me today."

She is anxious to procure her final citizenship papers before she goes abroad. The witnesses on her naturalization papers were her friends Mr. and Mrs. Victor Nelson of No 41 Temple avenue, Winthrop.

CATHOLIC PARTY JOINS THE FASCISTI

Rome, May 16 (By the Associated Press).—The national council of the popular or Catholic party has adopted by a large majority a proposal that the party co-operate with the Fascisti program.

A split between Premier Mussolini and the popular party culminated last month in the resignation of four Cabinet ministers belonging to that group. This action was precipitated by a resolution passed by the party congress some time ago which Premier Mussolini took as an expression of the party's reluctance to embrace the Fascisti principles.

DR. GRANT IS ARRAIGNED BY BISHOP FISKE

Utica, N. Y., May 16 (By International News Service).—Vigorous and thinly-veiled arraignment of the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, of New York, leading clinistically to the ultimatum that there "is no stopping place between faith in Christ's divinity and blank agnosticism," formed the theme of the annual address of Bishop Charles Fiske at the diocesan convention of the Episcopal Church at Grace Church today.

While Bishop Fiske did not name Dr. Grant, his references to the rector are so plain as to be unmistakable, said the Bishop.

"Everywhere people have questioned me about the controversy. They cannot understand, nor can I, how at a time when in some States there are forty-eight divorces for every 100 marriages a minister of the church can in good conscience announce his engagement to a woman whom the laws of his church will not permit him to marry.

"They cannot understand, nor can I, the peculiar mental twist permits him to continue the engagement indefinitely, while yet asserting his determination not to relinquish ministerial position.

JERITZA AND TENOR IN ROW AT VIENNA

Berlin, May 16.—Trouble is brewing in the Vienna national opera in connection with the approaching production of Puccini's opera, "Manon Lescaut," in which the title role will be sung by Madame Jeritza, recently returned from New York.

The American tenor, Alfred Piccaver, for many years a member of the Vienna ensemble, at first refused to sing with the famous diva. Puccini intervened, but it is rumored the clouds are still hanging low in the Vienna operatic sky.

HARDING TO AVOID WORLD COURT ISSUE

Washington, May 16.—Further evidence was forthcoming at the White House after the Cabinet that President Harding has determined to follow the advice of political experts within the Republican party carefully to avoid stressing the League of Nations Court issue on the Western and Alaskan trip. It was emphasized by the White House spokesman that the President had not undertaken to make any commitments abroad that would impair plan to the Senate for its approval.

SON LAYS WEBSTER'S SUICIDE TO FEAR FOR COLLEGE JOB

BROODED OVER HIS TROUBLES

Worcester, May 16.—Professor Arthur Gordon Webster of Clark University, most versatile man of science in the State, but self-styled "a failure," ended his life with two pistol bullets as a result of "brooding over his position at the university," according to his son, Arthur Gordon Webster, Jr.

The son's statement is in line with a chapter termed "The Great Academic Tragedy" in "The Goose Step," by Upton Sinclair. Sinclair asserted that the "plutocracy of Worcester" had gained control of the university, contrary to the wishes of its founder, and had "slowly forced out the greatest minds."

Dr. Webster recently was in controversy with President Wallace W. Atwood over the barring of the magazine "The Nation" from the library of the university. It was in this library that Professor Webster took his life.

Professor Webster's son, upon arriving home from New York, said:

"Father had been brooding over his position at Clark. Apparently things were not going well there for him. The research department, of which father had been a member for years, was gradually dissolving, its courses of study until, I understand, father was the only research head left. I think that father thought he would be the next one to go. However, I think his fears were groundless, for he had recently signed a contract for another year.

FEARED FOR SCHOOL.

"Another thing which worried him a great deal was the report that the graduate school was to be discontinued. He was a member of the faculty of the graduate school.

"A third thing was his failure in a couple of research experiments recently.

"I have not seen father for the last two weeks, so I do not know what has transpired within that time. But when I left him I felt that he was worried and I knew something was wrong."

HEAD OF CLARK SHOCKED.

President Wallace W. Atwood of Clark University denied emphatically that anything had gone wrong between Professor Webster and the university. He told of a conference held between Professor Webster and himself the night before Dr. Webster took his life.

Plans for continuing the graduate school were discussed, according to President Atwood. Also, according to President Atwood, Professor Webster agreed to represent him at the inauguration of President Stratton of Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston on June 11.

It was learned in Worcester that three Clark professors recently resigned, their resignations to take effect this coming June. But President Atwood said that he had made plans to take on eight new professors at the re-opening of the university year in September.

Professor Webster, it was learned, took his life a few hours before he was scheduled to enter a debate with "all comers" in Union Church, this city. The debate was to be on "International Relations."

Professor Webster's wife, who is sick at her home, No. 83 Williams street, has not been told of her husband's tragic death. His daughter, Miss Mary Shannon Webster, refused to comment on her father's death. Another daughter, Mrs. Harriet Eleanor Ware of Syracuse, N. Y., is en route East.

SINCLAIR'S VIEWS.

Upton Sinclair's chapter on Clark University was recalled with the announcement of Professor Webster's death.

Before the wealthy bankers and great business heads of Worcester secured control of the university, Sinclair pointed out, Clark had the highest standing of any university in the United States, having had one distinguished scientist for every two members of the faculty.

Since the college came under the rule of a board of directors composed entirely of business men and opponents of conservation, Sinclair stated, one after another of the best men have resigned from the faculty. Following the recent controversy over the utterances of Scott Nearing at a meeting of the Clark Liberal Club, the author added, six of the best educators at the University resigned in as many months as a protest against what they considered a "violation of the traditions of the college."

Wilkinson's Bride

DOLORES (KATHERINE ROSE)

FOLLIES STAR IS BRIDE OF TURFMAN

Paris, May 16.—Dolores, star show girl of the "Ziegfeld Follies," was married Saturday to William Tudor Wilkinson, turfman and art collector.

The ceremony was a quiet one, with Dudley Field Malone and his wife, Doris Malone, as the only witnesses.

Dolores, whose off-stage name is Kathleen Marie Rose, met Mr. Wilkinson at the time of the armistice celebrations, and their friendship had run a smooth and unhurried course.

Asked what plans he had made for his honeymoon, Mr. Wilkinson said: "There will be no honeymoon in the ordinary sense of the word. We hope the whole of our lives will be one long honeymoon.

"We shall be staying in Paris for some months and then we shall probably go to America before the Summer is over."

Mr. Wilkinson is well known as a breeder of racehorses. He had stables and horses in America, England and France, but recently retired from that field, declaring that the steeplechases are cruel, and are killing both jockeys and horses.

WARNS OF DRIVES AGAINST TOBACCO

Washington, May 16.—Intensive drives against all forms of tobacco have been inaugurated in all parts of the country "with the avowed object of burying tobacco in the same grave with John Barleycorn," Jesse A. Bloch, of Wheeling, W. Va., president of the Tobacco Merchants' Association of the United States, told the members in convention today.

"Every attack upon tobacco," Mr. Bloch said, "brings forth an additional flood of scientific authority testifying to the harmlessness of tobacco. But while our victory in the recent anti-tobacco war has been almost complete, the menace has not yet passed and it is not likely to pass so long as professional agitators are able to pass their hats and collect the coin."

MILLION LOSS BY FLOOD IN HOT SPRINGS

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Ark., May 16.—Merchants reopened their doors today after a night through which crews of men worked in tireless efforts to remove the wreckage and debris left behind by the flood and fire late Monday when torrents from a mountain cloudburst dashed down the slopes to form raging currents in the principal streets, while flames enveloped the buildings in an entire block.

The damage will exceed $1,000,000.

Mrs. Kate Christainson, the only person known to have received serious injury in the disaster, is in a hospital in a serious condition as a result of a crushed skull received when she was caught in her automobile and swept along three blocks.

Among the outstanding heroes of the disaster is Fire Captain John Lovett.

Lovet carried a woman from a burning building only to be engulfed in the irresistible current. Half walking, half swimming, he battled his way to a hose cart, lifted his human burden upon it to safety, then slipped back into the stream. He was swept away and thrown against a concrete post many yards beyond. When comrades lifted him from the water he was unconscious.

Guests trapped in the Marquette Hotel, the largest structure destroyed by the fire, escaped from the flames into the roaring torrent which had been Central avenue. With children in their arms or held aloft above the flood, men and women braved the streams and waded or swam to safety.

Nearly a hundred automobiles were bowled along like chips on the charging tide, so rapid was the current.

Cambridge, O., May 16.—More than a score of persons were injured, one seriously, when a tornado struck Byesville, five miles south of here. Approximately twenty buildings were unroofed. Charles Griffith, sixty-five, was seriously hurt when his home was demolished. He is expected to die. Three others in the house escaped with minor injuries.

Schenectady.—The Schenectady Railway Company henceforth will be run on an open-shop basis, Harry R. Weatherwax, president, told employes. Mayor Whitmyre and employes were to confer today in an effort to avert a strike.

Chicago.—Major-General George Bell, Jr., retired, commander of the Third Division during the World War, was presented with $30,000 in securities by a group of Chicago men in recognition of his military services.

MOTHER PLACED "PRICE TAG" ON HEAD, SAYS MRS. NICHOLS

WELLESLEY WIFE REGRETS "LOVELESS MARRIAGE"

Mrs. Ruth Buckingham Nichols yesterday began in the Boston American the story of her marriage to John H. Nichols of Wellesley —a story of "Bought and Paid For" in real life.

She related how, answering her mother's pleading, she stifled her idealism, her dreams of love and her conscience, and deliberately entered into a loveless marriage.

Her narrative is resumed today.

John Nichols is a successful business man. His astuteness in business built up a substantial fortune. With the acquisition of wealth he became accustomed to a philosophy that rules his life.

You saw something you wanted. You bought it.

"That's how Mr. Nichols viewed me when he first saw me," said Mrs. Nichols, in her interview, granted to the Boston American, in which she told of her life with the wool merchant. "And it was my own mother who put the price tag on me."

Mrs. J. H. Nichols

CHOSE "EASIEST WAY."

"I have said that I agreed to go to the highest bidder. The anguish that this terrible resolution caused me may be realized by the history of my engagement to Mr. Nichols. It dragged along for months. And every day my mother would point out the advantages of becoming his wife. She would urge it upon me, first from the viewpoint of what it would do for me and then from the viewpoint what it would do for her.

"For me it meant life free from the financial troubles that had come upon her in the latter years of her life. It was the most terrible thing that could happen to a woman, she has told me—poverty. For me it would mean a freedom from that spectre. For her it would mean a rehabilitation of her means, which had been dissipated by bad investments.

"Still, I let the engagement drag along. I was afraid. I listened to my mother's arguments. They were sound enough, from her point of view. My head said 'Marry this man. It is the easiest way.' My heart said 'Avoid this marriage—it is the bitterest way.'

PAID DOWN "ON ACCOUNT."

"Once my heart almost won. I broke off the engagement. Mr. Nichols knew how to meet the situation. He advanced some money to my mother. He called it a loan. But in reality it was merely the first installment of my purchase price. Up to that time he had merely bargained for me. Now he had purchased me, and paid something on account.

"Today my mother stands with Mr. Nichols. I have never once reproached her for the part she played in my thirteen years of torture. Perhaps that is why she has deserted me now and stands at his side. Perhaps she doesn't even understand.

"I know that all during the years when I bitterly regretted the bargain that had been made she would argue with me and scold me for my misery. She even thought I was a trifle off in my mind. She couldn't understand why a woman could not be happy with just money.

"I might have been able to go through the mockery of this life of bondage were it not for a specific development which arose.

"I could not tell my mother about this. I cannot take the public into my confidence. But it was the real, underlying cause of my determination to leave the house in which I was a prisoner in fact. It was my heart's prophesy fulfilled.

"I should have left this man's house long ago. But I had no place to go. I used to read about a man named Barr, who had been kept in State's Prison for a mistake he had made in his youth. Thousands of people were trying to get freedom for him, and only his family stood in the way.

"I felt a strange kinship for this man. I, too, had made a mistake in my youth. I, too, had gone to prison. And it was my family which stood in the way—my mother.

"I stood it until last Tuesday, when he came and branded me with a name that no woman can endure. That decided me. I packed up and fled."

2,000 WOMEN IN IRISH JAILS, SAYS CROWLEY

Twenty-one-year-old Peter Crowley, youngest of the twelve Irishmen who participated in the hunger strike which resulted in the death of Terence MacSwiney, who has just arrived in America, described to a reporter for the Boston American the many bitter ordeals he has undergone.

Peter Crowley.
He has been jailed seven times.

"The hunger strike was to show England that Ireland meant business," Crowley said. "Just as Washington accepted no compromise from England, so will Ireland not give in.

"The Irish people never accepted the treaty and never will. Just because a few traitors signed the peace doesn't mean that the whole Irish people wanted it. They have neither rejected or accepted the treaty and they won't until they all can vote.

"The human atrocities the people are suffering are unimaginable," he continued. "There are from 14,000 to 15,000 men and 2,000 women who have been thrown into filthy, unsanitary jails merely because they are sympathizers with the movement, not because they have had any active part."

Washington—The Federal Trade Commission announced today that it had dismissed, without prejudice, its complaint against the Helvetia Milk Condensing Company, Highland Ill., and forty-five other firms. The complaint charges a price conspiracy.

ROXBURY GIRL SHOPLIFTER IS JAILED

Annie E. Hogan, amateur shoplifter, was sentenced to an indefinite term in Sherborn Reformatory, by Judge Franklin P. Hammond in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court, East Cambridge after she had pleaded guilty.

Miss Hogan was charged with petty larceny from a beauty shop in Malden. It is charged that she and a pal named Dorothy Drake made a tour of the city and succeeded in leaving with goods and money owned by two of the shops.

SON WHO TOOK UP JAY GOULD'S BIG TASKS EXPIRES IN FRANCE

SURPASSED NOTED FATHER AS RAILWAY BUILDER

upon the death of his father, Jay Gould, December 2, 1892.

In addition to assuming responsibility, as trustee and executor, for the $30,000,000 estate left by his father, he carried on and expanded the great railroad holdings of the latter, and within a few years, during which he applied the lessons learned from the elder Gould, he became one of America's foremost railroad financiers.

The 6,000 miles of road left by Jay Gould grew into more than 20,000 miles under the management of his son, while the many investments in other huge enterprises, including the Western Union Telegraph Company, also were largely managed by the principal heir.

Mr. Gould was born in New York City, February 6, 1864, the sixth in line of descent from Major Nathan Gould, or Gold, the original ancestor, who came from Devonshire, England in 1648 and settled in Fairfield, Ct.

The Gould family fortune dates from 1869, when Jay Gould, a partner in his father's hardware store in Delaware County, New York, bought for ten cents on the dollar a controlling interest in the Rutland & Washington railroad, a little backwater line running between Troy, N. Y., and Rutland, Vt.

Two years after purchasing the road, Jay Gould had succeeded in extricating it from financial difficulties, where upon he sold it to the George, Jr., and Kingdon interest originally acquired at ten.

George Jay Gould, even when quite young, showed an inclination to follow in the footsteps of his father. He received a through education from private instructors, and subsequently entered Columbia University, but was not graduated.

After a tour of Europe, he became a clerk in the Western Union office, where he developed such an aptitude for detail he soon became the assistant to his father. George Gould was at his desk ten hours a day, and often remained long into the night, learning the business which, when he became its vice-president a few years later, operated more than a million miles of telegraph wire.

For two decades after the death of his father George Gould continued to manage the vast properties and many financiers and railroad men have declared that he frequently surpassed his famous parent in his capacity to weave an intricate jumble of railroads into a definite and complete system.

Mr. Gould's first marriage was in 1886 to Edith Kingdon, who dropped dead while playing golf on the Gould estate at Lakewood, N. J., in November, 1921. From this union there were five children.

In May, 1922, Mr. Gould married Frances Miracle, a former actress thirty years his junior. The second marriage was regarded as almost as much of an event as the marriage of Miss Gould to the Marquis de Castellane, the ceremony in the Church of St. Thomas, New York, and the reception at the Gould home, 857 Fifth avenue, being the most brilliant social functions of the season.

COURT ORDERS RELEASE OF ART O'BRIEN

London, May 16 (By the Associated Press).—The Court of Appeal today ordered the release of Art O'Brien, who was deported to Ireland after being arrested in the March roundup of republican sympathizers.

O'Brien was brought before the court on a writ of habeas corpus.

Upon his discharge by the court, O'Brien was immediately taken into custody by officers from Scotland Yard and was removed to Bow street.

In the Bow street police court O'Brien was charged with seditious conspiracy.

The case of Art O'Brien, involving the status of the hundred or more Irish agitators deported to Ireland after the March roundup in England and Scotland, has attracted wide attention in Great Britain, especially in view of its reaction on the government.

O'Brien twice made unsuccessful application for a writ of habeas corpus, but on May 7 the Court of Appeal in London decided that the writ should be granted. The Irish Free State government, after taking the position that Ireland's prisoners were her own, ultimately abandoned that attitude and O'Brien was sent back to England.

The situation is of interest to the government because of the fact that the habeas corpus act of 1670, under which O'Brien was released, provides that no resident of England may be deported as a prisoner, and declares that persons responsible for violation of the terms of the act may be heavily penalized.

The March deportations were by order of Home Secretary Bridgeman, and the government now finds itself faced with the necessity of passing an indemnity act to protect the secretary and other officials who acted under him.

Dr. Bridgeman announced in the House of Commons yesterday that the British government was requesting the Irish Free State to return to England all the deportees.

He aded that the government was considering whether to prefer criminal charges against some of the persons interested, but that subject to such proceedings the prisoners would be released on their return to England.

KEEP 2 WIVES IN ONE HOME

sults in the saving of rent and of alimony. Life is never monotonous in the Cummings bungalow. Mr. Cummings and his two wives contend that the law of man and of God is being obeyed in this triangular love nest, and if the neighbors can't see it—well—

It was something of a shock to quiet and easy going Derby when three men and two Cummings and his two wives arrived, set up tents on the banks of the river and started the construction of a three-way bungalow love nest.

When local gossip learned that one of the women was Mrs. Roy Cummings No. 1, divorced and happy, and that the other was Mrs. Roy Cummings No. 2, formerly Miss Irene Shaw, recently of the Jack O'Lantern Company, there was a sensation.

TRIO MET LAST YEAR.

Derby could not, and does not to this day, understand the arrangement.

"Why, next" the comedian asks. "Mrs. Cummings No. 1 divorced me because we couldn't make the grade together. She was dark, of the Spanish type, and I was red headed. We just couldn't agree.

"I gave her $1,020,000. That's fair enough, isn't it? Count it up. I gave her a $17,000 home at Freeport, a $3,500 car, a $1,000,000 baby and a $100 dog."

The meeting of the three occurred last year at Long Beach, where Cummings and his second wife met the first Mrs. Cummings.

The two women immediately became friends. The friendship continued through the Winter and a few months ago the three, with Edna, five, child of the first marriage, decided on a living agreement for this Summer.

NO. 1'S IDEA.

Of this Cummings said today:

"It was No. 1 who had the bright idea to build a bungalow on the Housatonic. She figured it out that two women could live as cheaply as one, if both shared the work, and No. 2 fell for the idea.

"The girls also decided that as they were the same sizes they could wear each other's clothes.

"I also saw that I was going to save a lot of alimony, and out of this No. 2 is going to get a fur coat next Winter with all the fixings."

Physicians Invent Electric Bath to Cure Disease

New York, May 16.—Drs. F. B. Schaune and W. S. Benson, both of Newark, N. J., claim they have invented a medicinal bath whose properties are far superior to the old-fashioned Saturday night ablutions. Instead of bathing the body with water, which they claim is of casual nature, they drench the body with electric waves, a much more efficient way.

Indeed, they claim that their method not only cleans but cures pneumonia, bearifis and nervous troubles.

DANISH STEAMER ASHORE, IN DISTRESS

Halifax, N. S., May 16.—The Danish steamer Jan is ashore on South Point, Northumberland Straits and leaking badly, said a wireless message today. The Jan, a vessel of 1,900 tons commanded by Captain Kurthahn, left Nuevitas, Cuba, May 3, for Montreal with sugar.

BONAR LAW VISITS PARIS ON REST TRIP

Paris, May 16 (By Associated Press)—Andrew Bonar Law, the British Prime Minister, who has been taking a sea voyage for his health, arrived here today. He observed strict incognito. It is understood he will make a short stay in Paris and then go elsewhere for a further rest before returning to London.

AJOUE WEEPS AND DEMANDS "FAIR TRIAL"

Providence, May 16.—"Oh, give us a fair trial!"

This was the dramatic declaration today of Herbert Ajoue at the continuation of his trial on the charge of murder of Charles J. McDermott before Judge Hahn and a jury in Superior Court.

Following the remark, which threw the courtroom into temporary confusion, Ajoue was overcome by an outburst of weeping.

Ajoue's outburst, accompanied by his thumping on a table, came during the cross-examination of Elizabeth Tiernan by Attorney John J. Fitzgerald, the defendant's counsel.

It was in the Tiernan woman's room at No. 101 Bradford street, that the body of McDermott, murdered by carving-knife stabs in the back, was found on the night of December 16, last.

Fitzgerald was questioning the witness with relation to drinking in her room on the night of the murder. Objections by District Attorney-General George Hurley to Fitzgerald's questions were repeatedly sustained by Judge Hahn when Ajoue lost his restraint.

The Tiernan woman testified that there was some drinking in their room and that Ajoue and his wife came in late at night. Mrs. Ajou, she said, was intoxicated, and threw her arms around the neck of Walter Williamson. She was later assisted upstairs.

2 WOMEN HURT IN AUTO CRASH, DRIVER FLEES

While the Weymouth police, aided by the State police, are combing the country for the drunken autoist, who, after crashing into a light touring car on Bridge street, North Weymouth, abandoned his car and fled into the night, Mrs. Walter B. Brayshaw and her daughter, Mrs. Thomas C. Thompson, occupants of the wrecked touring car, are at their homes slowly recovering from injuries received when the larger car hit the one in which they were riding.

Mrs. W. C. Brayshaw.

ABANDONED CAR STOLEN.

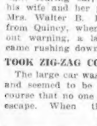
The abandoned car was found by the police to be the property of George J. O'Neill of No. 9 Stratford road, West Roxbury, a Boston leather broker. According to Mrs. O'Neill, the last she saw of the car was when her husband drove it away the morning of the accident. She said he received notice from the police that it had been stolen, and was in a garage in North Weymouth in a wrecked condition.

Mrs. T. C. Thompson

According to Thomas C. Thompson, who owned and operated the light touring car, he was driving his wife and her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Walter B. Brayshaw, home from Quincy, when suddenly, without warning, a large touring car came rushing down upon them.

TOOK ZIG-ZAG COURSE.

The large car was going very fast, and seemed to be taking a zig-zag course that no one in its path could escape. When the cars crashed, Dr. Brayshaw and his wife were thrown out, Mrs. Brayshaw striking on her head.



Dr. W. C. Brayshaw

Mr. Thompson and his wife, who were in the front seat, were not thrown out, but were severely shaken up.

On examining the abandoned machine, the police found a small jug with about a pint of brandy in it, which they are holding as evidence.

They have a good idea as to who the driver of the fast car is, and expect to make an arrest. In the meantime they are awaiting developments.

In his reply the Mayor states that on account of the necessity of a new fire station in the Back Bay district, which is needed at once because of the building development which has been going on for the past five years on a major scale, the project will have to be postponed in Brighton.

TAUNTED SCHOOLBOY KILLS SELF WITH GUN

Greenville, Pa., May 16.—Because he could not endure the taunts and "kidding" of his fellow schoolmates, Raymond Baker, ten years old, took a gun and shot himself. He lies dead in the home of his parents. His father says that he reprimanded the youth for not attending school because he could not stand teasing. Pointing out that the "kidding" was done only in fun, the father sent the boy to school. The boy returned home and shot himself.

Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin Now in Paris, Betty Alden Reports

Miss Vera Howell, daughter of Mrs. Percy D. Haughton, will become the bride of George Richmond Fearing, Jr., on June 16th. The bride-to-be is a sub-deb.

By BETTY ALDEN.

MRS. CHARLES S. HAMLIN and her popular daughter, Anna, have reached the gay French capital on their travels abroad and are staying for a while at the Hotel Du Rune.

After a merry season at Washington—where the Hamlins have spent several Winters and where Anna Hamlin has many admirers among the younger diplomatic corps—she and her mother sailed for foreign shores. The early Winter was spent at Bermuda, where they encountered many of their Boston friends. The Hamlins will, I believe, come as usual this Summer to their place at Mattapoisett.

THE first guests to register at the Lenox Club out Berkshire way were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Eliot Guild of Beacon street. The club opened on Sunday.

ANDREW ROBESON of Boston and Newport has left the latter place for New York, planning to sail for Europe sometime this week to join Mrs. Robeson (Laura Swan) there. The Robeson's place at Newport is known as "Cliff Cottage."

MR. AND MRS. VALENTINE HOLLINGSWORTH, Roland G. Hopkins and Miss Marcia Hopkins and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jordan were among the Boston passengers returning from Europe on board the White Star liner Olympic, which arrived in New York yesterday.

Miss Marcia Hopkins was formerly presented to society last June, but instead of remaining on for a year of debutante festivities, she sailed away in June for a year of study in Paris. She will probably enter Vassar College in the Fall. Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins have a place in Chestnut Hill known as "Gladwood," where their daughter's presentation dance took place.

THE sub-debs will be much in evidence when pretty Vera Howell becomes the bride of George Richmond Fearing, Jr., the ceremony scheduled for June 13th at St. Paul's Church in Dedham.

The very youthful bride-to-be's sister, Miss Beatrice A. Howell, will attend as maid of honor. One of the bride-maids, I note, is petite Emilie Winslow, sub-deb daughter of the Cameron McRae Winslows, a most attractive looking girl, with dark brown eyes and lovely auburn hair. Two other sub-debs in the brides-maids' group are the Misses Elizabeth Bartlett and Helen Hamlin, Miss Helen Scott of Wellesley, a bud of 1921-22, being another attendant.

Miss Howell is the step-daughter of Percy D. Haughton of football coach fame, and is herself a sub-deb. She is a blonde, with vivid coloring, and a clever equestrienne as well.

Paris—Georges Barbot, the French aviator, who recently crossed and re-crossed the English channel in a thirteen-horsepower airplane, plans to visit the United States and glide from New York to Chicago in an "air flivver," making only one stop.

SOUTH END MAN HELD UP AND ROBBED

Three youthful bandits, one of them armed with a dirk, attacked Sextron Reas, who conducts a fruit stand at No. 999 Washington street, South End, and robbed him of $700. The men escaped.

According to Reaes, he had observed the men passing the store before he started to carry in fruit from the outside shelves and lock up the stand.

The three bandits accosted him as he locked the door, and one of them threatened to stab him if he made an outcry. He was struck from the rear with a blunt object, which dazed him.

He described the men to the police as being between eighteen and twenty-one years old. Two of them were about five feet seven inches tall, and the third was several inches taller. One of the shorter men wore a crush hat. All were dark clothes, he said.

16-Year-Old Girl Still Loves Her Aged Abductor

Syracuse, May 16.—"If only he had secured a divorce we would be happily married. We had a little home all planned. I love him in spite of everything," said pretty little sixteen-year-old Mary Shepardson, of this city, regarding her blasted romance with sixty-five year-old Stephen Humes.

Humes was indicted by the grand jury on an abduction charge after the couple were arrested in a "love nest" at Auburn, Ind.

COP MURDERER AND GIRL HIDE IN MOUNTAINS

Cleveland, May 16.—The most definite trace of John Leonard Whitfield, sought as the slayer of Patrolman Dennis Griffin since he disappeared Friday, was received from Mayor Quick, of Cedar Grove, W. Va., today.

A roadster answering the description of that in which Whitfield and a girl companion, known as Mary Price, left here, was seen passing through Cedar Grove. The license number corresponded to that appearing on Whitfield's machine. A man and a woman were in the car.

Mayor Quick is of the opinion that Whitfield is hiding in the mountains.

ASSERTS MINERS ASK U. S. CONTROL

New York, May 16 (By International News Service).—"Nationalization of coal mines will be made an issue by the miners and they will fight it out with a strike on that line," former Governor John J. Cornwell of West Virginia, declared today in an address before the National Association of Manufacturers.

"Unless the Government Fact Finding Commission's report is satisfactory to the miners—and it will not be satisfactory unless it flatly advocates nationalization of mines—further trouble will result," Cornwell asserted.

"Cranks and simpletons" in New York are financing agitators for the nationalization program, according to Cornwell.

How every woman can banish ironing troubles with Linit, the new scientific starch discovery

LINIT is a new starch—made by a modern process. It remains in a thin fluid form—even for hours after it cools.

Linit does not form a thick, sticky jelly, that smears and clots the material and makes your iron stick while ironing. Because Linit is made by a modern scientific process.

You get a "body" with Linit that is found only in goods fresh from the manufacturer; and a fashionable finish that only the most perfect French laundries can duplicate.

Just a little bit in your sheets and pillow-cases—gives that lovely texture found only in pure linen.

You can use Linit on every sort of fabric—whether lawn, linen, cotton, organdie, gingham, lace or curtains.

Your grocer has Linit. Ask for it today.

Linit is made by the Corn Products Refining Company—makers of the famous Argo, Duryea and Kingsford's Starches—Karo Syrup and Mazola Salad and Cooking Oil.

If you cannot obtain LINIT at your grocer communicate with

STORIES OF BOSTON TOWN

The Amazing Romance of What Drugs Do to Hollywood

See Page 17

THE CAST OF "THE AFFAIRS OF LADY BOSTON" STARTS OUT on location and attracts a bit of attention on Washington street. To the right, close-ups of some of the principal characters, whose adventures will be reported from day to day by Hub-Bub, until the picture is completed.

"THE AFFAIRS OF LADY BOSTON"

A handsome heavy came to our town. One look at his brutal duster and sinister moustache and you could tell that he didn't mean right by Our Nell.

Her eighteen blossom-festooned Springs had been spent in Chelsea, on the farm. Nature smiled at her. The cats in the village said nature laughed. A look at Nell was enough to make any body laugh, the hussies whispered. Little did they know of the all-consuming fire that sizzled in her heart. Little did they care. They reeked not. At eventide, when the sun tenderly lingered o'er the hills which nestled around the little village, Nell raked hay and dreamed her dreams of the city—of Boston and of Washington street, the Great White Way. Not even Ma Green or her duly married husband, Pa Green, suspected that the secluded, pent-up life of their babe in gingham was due for so many trials and tribulations.

Aggravatin' Papa! We mustn't give the whole plot away. Let us stop. It is the beginning of two reels of heartache, undreamed-of perils in a great city, dealings with demons in human form and at last, with the dawn of a new day, the final fade-out.

First Day Devoted Largely to Costuming

The filming of "The Affairs of Lady Boston" has started. The first day was devoted largely to costuming instructions in make-up and a reading of the script from which we have lifted just enough to tantalize you.

You shall know all before the week is ell over. Hub-Bub will accompany the "Affairs of Lady Boston" company in its various journeys throughout Greater Boston. Every phase of the picture will be reported for those who are interested in the experiment of creating a two-reel picture with men, women and children who have never before done any acting of any kind.

Fifty persons who have dreamed for years of being given a chance in a picture have suddenly had that chance thrust upon them. L. R. Brager, producing director of the Hollinson Corporation of New York, is amazed at the quality of talent revealed in the cast he has lined up. He chose his people from among those who presented casting coupons printed in this newspaper.

The production of "The Affairs of Lady Boston" may have a revolutionary effect upon the motion picture industry.

The great howl in the business has been about the need for new faces, new technique, fresh personalities.

Finds Splendid Screen Possibilities

In the all-amateur cast of this two-reel burlesque, Brager says, he has already found at least three persons who are splendid possibilities for the screen. There is a likelihood that what Brager is doing in Boston will be done by the larger picture companies throughout the country.

The few thousand dollars that it costs to make such pictures is well invested in the best possible way to locate new talent. If "The Affairs of Lady Boston" results in the discovery of one great actress, or comedian, or eccentric type, it will be a good investment. Present indications are that several will be found.

Tonight it is planned to make the big cabaret scene in the picture. The Egyptian room of the Hotel Bruns-wick will be used, and the scenario promises that in this scene Nell, who has been a child before, will suddenly realize that she is a woman, with the instincts and thoughts of a woman. It listens promising.

What Happened to Darling Nell

Tomorrow Hub-Bub will tell something about the various members of the cast—what they do when they're not making movies. There will appear also a complete report of what happened to Nell in the cabaret, and of her adventures in the the Great City (Boston) which preceded her introduction to the gay night life.

Who knows? Maybe the little Dorchester girl who plays one of the cabaret girls may turn out to be a Pola Negri of the future. Or perchance the freckled little kid from East Somerville way, who was seen in the first shot, in the part where Nell feeds the pigs, may be 1924's Wesley Barry.

Restrain yourselves. We're just as impatient as you are. Tomorrow, gentle readers, tomorrow.

With bated breating, we await the dawn of tomorrow. What does it hold for us? Gosh! If we could only swipe that scenario!

DOG DELAYS SHIP SAILING UNTIL HIS MASTER ARRIVES

New York, May 15.—Pip, a chow dog, owned by Harry Crossovere, a wholesale grocer, prevented the sailing of the Bermuda steamship Fort Victoria, for fifteen minutes, until his master, who was to sail on the boat, arrived.

The dog barked and threatened sailors who were about to pull in the gangplank, until the arrival of his master. The latter proudly declared that he had sent his dog ahead with instructions to hold up the boat, when he found that he could not reach the pier on time.

SILENT 14 YEARS, MAN OF MYSTERY DEAD

Bullet in Hand Halts Daring Driver

SPOKE TO ONLY ONE PERSON

Hugo Sergmark, Recluse for 14 Years, Passes Away; $850 Under His Pillow

Death has sealed the lips of Hugo Sergmark, who for fourteen years maintained a silence that was broken in the presence of only one man—his employer and confidant.

Sergmark, a man of many mysteries, was found dead in his room at the Salvation Army Home. Under his pillow was found $850 in cash.

Why Sergmark maintained such rigid silence will probably never be known.

ONCE BOOKKEEPER.

At one time he was a bookkeeper in the employ of a downtown department store. Without a word by way of explanation, he suddenly left his employment, and became a mechanic and a recluse.

For the past eight years he has been in the employ of the Sexton Can Company of Everett. He became a foreman soon after entering the service of the company, and retained the position until after his death.

His employer is the only man to whom he is known to have spoken. But to this man, even, his confidences were rare, and offered little to explain Sergmark's taciturnity.

NEVER SPOKE.

At the Salvation Army Home, Sergmark was known for his generosity and charity, although he never spoke to those whom he "staked" to food and a bed. During his fourteen years' stay at the Salvation Army Home his hours were mechanically regular. For fourteen years he retired, ate, and arose at exactly the same hours. Occasionally he smiled. He never broke his silence.

Death was due to natural causes, according to Medical Examiner Leary. Relatives are being sought. The $850 found under the dead man's pillow is in the custody of Michael J. Sughrue, public administrator.

Appeals to Women Voters

MRS. TRUEWORTHY WHITE.

"The average male voter is like one of a flock of sheep; he follows a leader. He doesn't question, he merely follows," declared Mrs. Trueworthy White, American Citizenship lecturer of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, in an address before the League at the Twentieth Century Club.

"Women have the opportunity in the new relations placed before them to show they are possessed of more principle than to be led in this way," she continued. "Women must govern their political attitudes by their ripe judgment, formed on careful investigation. They must not be led—they must be convinced."

SEEK HIGHER-UPS IN COAL CASE

Lawrence, May 16.—Criticism of the statute which places the blame on the retailers in the case of selling "fireless" coal, was made today in district court by Judge J. J. Mahoney.

Samuel Jabour was charged with selling coal containing 27 per cent. slate. He said he bought it from another party who said he bought it from the Hoverhill Charcoal Company. The judge continued the case until action could be taken in connection with the persons who had sold it to Jabour.

"It does not seem right," said Judge Mahoney, "that out in Pennsylvania they can mine coal and ship it with its slate to us and be without the jurisdiction of the statute while the retailer suffers."

CUTTER SEEKS RUM SHIP ASHORE IN FOG

New York, May 16.—The Coast Guard cutter Seminole set out today to seek a rum running vessel reported to have gone ashore off Fire Island in the fog. Reports of the wreck were sent in from a shore station. The fog was so dense the Seminole was unable to find the distressed ship.

N. E. LINKED IN POISON PEN NOTES

Mrs. Ryan Robbed of Jewels in York Harbor at Time of Maxwell's Visit There

New England is hooked up in bizarre manner today with the poison pen mystery of New York and Philadelphia society.

Victims of the poison pen onslaught, in which George Maxwell, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, has been indicted, include some of the wealthy folks whose Summer homes were looted in a string of unsolved jewelry robberies at York Harbor, Me., last Summer.

Mrs. Allan Ryan's home at York Harbor was robbed of $15,000 worth of jewelry.

Mrs. Ryan is one of the poison pen victims. It was her husband who complained to District Attorney Banton of New York about receipt of letters linking her name with that of George Maxwell. It was Ryan who demanded Maxwell's extradition from London to face charges of forgery in the third degree and sending scurrilous letters through the mails.

OTHER ROBBERIES.

Mrs. L. H. Page of Philadelphia lost a diamond bracelet in the reading room of York Harbor Club. She is one of the society women to whom poison pen letters were sent.

George Maxwell, according to information sent to Dist.-Atty. Banton by Sheriff Fred W. Marshall of York Harbor, was at York Harbor from July 22 until the end of August last Summer.

DETECTIVES COME IN.

Added international flavor is given the new developments in the case by renewed entry of the Scaffa Detective Agency of New York, representing Lloyd's of London.

Sheriff Marshall is understood to have talked with District Attorney Banton of New York over the long-distance telephone from York Harbor.

The information from Sheriff Marshall to District Attorney Banton was that Maxwell was frequently seen at York Harbor with Mrs. Ryan and also with Mrs. Page. Maxwell, according to the sheriff, arrived at the Maine resort July 21, 1922.

AUTO DISLOCATES WOMAN'S SHOULDER

Mrs. Josephine Pinel, 63 years old, of No. 15 Elgin street, West Roxbury, received a dislocated right shoulder and abrasions of the hand today when she was struck by an automobile while crossing the street in front of No. 2 Exchange street. She was taken to the relief hospital. The automobile was driven, the police say, by Harold Holland of Medford.

WOMAN FACES JURY ON $1,600 THEFT CHARGE

MARGARET OREM AND DAUGHTER

Mrs. Orem is on trial before Judge John F. Brown and a jury in Suffolk Superior Court for the larceny of $1,650 worth of merchandise from a department store. She was indicted on fifteen counts. According to the prosecution, Mrs. Orem purchased two years ago household furnishings, wearing apparel, imported rugs and other furnishings, and charged them to the account of Mrs. Frank Golden, No. 13 Garrison road, Brookline. It is contended, Mrs. Orem occupied at that time the apartment at No. 13 Garrison road, vacated by Mrs. Golden.

LAWRENCE GIRL ATTACKED BY FATHER'S COLLIE DOG

Lawrence, May 16.—Ten-year-old Helen Donnellson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Donnellson of No. 109 Marston street, was badly bitten on the leg by a collie dog owned by her father.

Motorcycle Officer Daniel Kiley shot the animal. The head of the dog will be forwarded to Boston to be examined for any trace of rabies.

STEAMSHIP LEVIATHAN NOW ON WAY TO BOSTON

Newport News, Va., May 16.—The steamship Leviathan sailed from Newport News today for Boston, where she will be dry-docked for the finishing touches of her recondition-ing for trans-Atlantic service.

AUTO THIEF IS SHOT IN CHASE

Captured in Bowdoin Square After Nine Shots Riddle the Car

Nine shots were fired from the pistols of five police officers in a wild chase through the streets surrounding Scollay square for an automobile thief in a stolen car.

The daring driver was captured only after his right hand had been punctured by a bullet and the car he was driving had crashed into the curbstone on Bulfinch street.

DRIVES SEDAN OFF.

At the City Hall avenue police station, where he was locked up, the man said he was John Sherry, twenty-two years old, of No. 22 Orrin street, Cambridge.

Patrolmen Keating and Adair of the City Hall avenue station discovered Sarry acting in a suspicious manner around the automobiles parked outside the Quincy House.

They watched him enter a large sedan and start off into Elm street. Keating and Adair drew their revolvers, jumped aboard a passing taxicab and ordered the driver to get abreast of the car Sarry was driving.

POLICE OPEN FIRE.

Sarry almost stalled the car he was driving as he swung into the traffic on Hanover street. The two patrolman shouted to him to stop.

Sarry, however, paid no attention to the police commands.

Just as he got underway both Keating and Adair opened fire. Three bullets from each police pistol were fired at the fleeing car. Some of them imbedded in the back of the car but did not halt the driver.

WHISTLES CALL AID.

Still leaning from the running board of the taxicab, the officers began blowing their police whistles. The noise attracted the attention of Patrolman Larry Boyle and Special Officers Andrew Mullin and Frank Brombach.

The three latter officers stationed themselves in a half circle at Bowdoin square and Bulfinch street. And when Sherry turned into Bulfinch street he was met by bullets from three sides.

COLLAPSES ON WHEEL.

Undaunted by his wounds, Sherry sought to run down the officers. But the car crashed against the curbstone and the front right wheel crumpled.

As Keating and Adair jumped from the running board of the taxicab.

Suffering from the sting of his broken hand and from the jolt of the breaking down of the car as it came to an abrupt stop, Sherry fell forward on the steering wheel in a state of collapse." He was taken to the Relief Hospital.

The stolen car was the property of Joseph Bloom of No. 25 Parkvale avenue, Allston.

VIEWS OF BOSTON

"Footlight Follies"

By Harmony

ARE pickles romantic? Anybody will say they are who saw "Footlight Follies," the musical comedy presented in Jordan Hall by members of H. P. Hood & Sons' Mutual Benefit Association.

The cast and chorus included more than 100 persons, with pretty girls as plentiful as—well, as pickles in a barrel.

The pickle theme came into the plot in this way. The rich but cruel father, was an American pickle king. He swore his lovely daughter should not wed the poor young man, Dad Pickle took his daughter to Spain, putting a vinegar finish to Cupid, he thought. But the suitor followed and, of course, you know he won the pickle heiress after many complications.

One of the interpolated features was a "King Tut" dance in costume by Miss Beatrice Bridges. The pickle king role was taken by John J. Shields. Others who were prominent included J. Harry Hildreth, Jr., Fred J. Rogers, Thelma Hersey, Irene Charron, Constance D. Cooper, Alice Shea, Dorothy E. Hodgkins, May Smith and Veronica L. Nicholson.

THE POPPY PERIL By LAUCHLIN JAMES

An Eye-Opener Romance in Which Is Depicted the Horror of What Drugs Do to Hollywood

BEGIN THIS STORY NOW

Two days after Kerry Rowan, a noted motion picture director, had visited the offices of the District Attorney in Los Angeles Rowan is found shot to death in his home, with a bowl of poppies scattered on the floor beside him. Rowan has given much information whereby the drug evil in Hollywood might be attacked and had promised to risk death by testifying against those caught in raids, for the sake of a clean Hollywood and because of his sincere affection for a young film star. Before this he has visited China and India where he has seen the effect of drugs on men and women both in high and low life. He becomes a movie director at Hollywood, then, and strikes the trail of the poppy again. He gathers evidence and places it in the hands of the district attorney.

The Murder of Rowan

BEFORE Cecily could continue her story, Tin Moy paused at the hall door to inform his master that he was going to the city, at last, and to ask if there were anything he could do before leaving. Being assured that there was not, the Chinaman opened the front door, paused there a moment and went swiftly out.

As he did so a figure standing in the entrance of a driveway across the street shrank back quickly into the shadow of a palm. Tin Moy caught the movement but kept boldly on his way.

As he disappeared at the end of the street Denison Blair stepped into the driveway again and stood frowning in the direction of Rowan's bungalow.

"Fine," he muttered maliciously. "All alone with him, are you? And a hunch you'd hear watching tonight. Well, you'd better come out of there pretty damn quick or I'm coming over and start something neither of you will forget in a hurry." He stepped back into the shadows and waited.

Inside the house Cecily was saying. "And then he said, 'Kerry Rowan, eh? Well, since he's giving away secrets, let me tell you something about him. While I was back East I met a man who had seen Rowan on the screen, in one of those first pictures he was in, and this man tells me that his name isn't Rowan at all; it's Reyer—Kenneth Reyer, and he had to get out of New York because he was mixed up in the sudden death of a beautiful society girl there. That's your Kerry Rowan, for you,' he said."

Rowan looked down at the rug and gave vent to a prolonged, weary sigh. It had come at last.

"Of course, I told him I didn't believe a word of it," Cecily went on, indignantly. "And I told him I was going straight to you the first chance I got and tell you just what kind of a story he was spreading around. He said I could go as far as I liked. Then he went away and I went up and said good night to mother and pretended I was going to bed. As soon as her light was out I sneaked down stairs and came here as fast as I could walk."

Rowan leaned over and took both her hands affectionately in his. "You're a darling child," said he, "and a real little friend. It was sweet of you to come here, but it also was a little imprudent and now I must take you home right away. I'll tell you about this story of Blair's as we go along."

"There's not the slightest need for you to see me home," protested Cecily. "I know you're busy." She nodded toward the desk from which Rowan had risen as she entered.

"Fatally Compromised"

"I know, but I've had an odd feeling of depression all day today. An ancient enemy of Tin Moy's showed up this morning, a member of a rival tong who tried to kill him one time in Honolulu. He looked the house over carefully and then went away, but I'm afraid he has Tin Moy spotted."

"How exciting!" exclaimed Cecily, "but his enemy wouldn't do anything to me, surely. I'm not afraid. Why, you can almost see our house from your front door. I'll tell you; you stand and watch me up to the porch, and then if everything's all right, I'll wave my hand. It's only a step from there to our front walk."

"If I was imprudent it's too late to help that now. We are fatally compromised, sir, and a few minutes won't make any difference. It's the first time we've ever been alone like this, and I like it. Go on, please, and tell me what you were going to."

So, in as few words as possible, Rowan told her Carra's pitiful story and explained how he had suddenly decided to wipe that part of his life off the slate and start afresh.

"That's what following the poppy path did for her," he concluded. "Do you wonder that I sometimes wish those wretched flowers had never been created?"

Cecily looked at him with a world of sympathy in her eyes. "No, Mr. Rowan, I don't wonder a bit, and I think you're just too noble for any words." Then her gaze alighted on the bowl which graced the top of the desk and she added, "But why do you have them around, then—and withered ones, at that?"

"Let me tell you about him," said Cecily

Rowan glanced at the poppies. "I didn't put them there," he assured her. "That plagued secretary of mine did it. I meant to have Tin Moy throw them out, but I forgot about it. Come; you must go now, Cecily. Don't worry your pretty little head about Denison Blair, I'll attend to him."

The gentleman referred to had, in the meantime, been getting extremely impatient. Just as he had made upon his mind to hammer upon the door of the bungalow and demand admittance, the door in question swung open and he saw Cecily appear upon the porch with Rowan at her elbow. Shrinking back out of sight, he watched the girl bid his rival good night and walk briskly up the street. At the corner she turned to wave in Kerry reassuringly. He waved in return and the girl passed from sight.

While this scene was being enacted, a fourth figure, crouching and furtive, slipped from behind a bush in the back yard of the bungalow and stole up on the kitchen steps.

Warning Poppies

"Poppies!" repeated District Attorney Chase inwardly, as he read the afternoon paper's account of how Kerry Rowan had been found dead that morning. "Poppies, when he hated them so!" That's a mighty queer, I wonder if it was a warning left for others; a sort of Oriental Black Hand symbol."

He continued rapidly to absorb the details of the crime as set forth in the paper.

"Apparently the victim had half risen as the shot was fired and in pitching forward onto the floor he knocked the bowl off the desk," the paper stated. "The discovery of the crime was reported by Matthew Crane, a scenic architect employed by Fitch Films, Inc., who says he went to Rowan's bungalow about 10 o'clock and, being unable to get any answer at the front door, went around to the rear. He found the kitchen door slightly ajar. Subsequent investigation shows it to have been jimmied. The house was silent and deserted.

"Crane says he walked through the kitchen into the dining-room and there he observed that the lights in the living room were still turned on. Upon entering the living room, according to his story, he found the slain director lying beside the desk. Having made sure Rowan was dead, Crane then went to the telephone and told Peter Fitch, his employer, what he had found.

"Fitch at once notified the police and set out for the home of his popular director. The news of the murder spread rapidly through the studio and work came to a standstill.

"Cecily Brook, the winsome ingenue who is idolized by thousands of film fans, left the stage the moment she heard the news, and rushed to the scene of the crime. She was hysterical with grief, but it appears from her replies to police questioning that she was alone with Rowan in the bungalow as late as 10:30 o'clock last night.

"Her reason for being there brings out one of the most startling phases of the mystery. Revealing as it does the fact that the murdered man was living under an assumed name. According to Rowan's own admission, says Miss Brook, his real name was Kenneth Reyer and he once was known quite widely in New York as a clubman, art dealer and member of the lively Birchmont Yacht Club set.

"This information had just reached her last evening and, believing it to be a libel, she had gone to Rowan to acquaint him with what was being said about him. To her astonishment, states Miss Brook, Rowan admitted that the story was true, giving her, at the same time, what she considered a sufficient reason for his wishing to keep his past life a secret.

Jealousy

"Thereupon, says Miss Brook, she said good night to him and went home, Rowan coming out on the porch to see her safely up the street. Medical testimony makes it evident that it must have been shortly after her departure that the crime was committed.

"In giving her story to the police, the film star named Denison Blair, a fellow director of Rowan's, as the man who had told her that her friend was not who he pretended to be.

"She asserts that her informant was bitterly jealous of Rowan, though her relations with the latter, she insists, had never passed beyond the stage of a warm friendship based on a mutual interest in reading and self-culture.

"The police at once questioned Blair as to his whereabouts last night and got from him a prompt and unexpected corroboration of the story told by Cecily Brook. He was angry at Miss Brook because of the manner in which she received his information concerning Rowan, he stated, and after leaving her home he lingered near by to see whether she would make good her threat to go straight to his confrere with the story.

SUN AND WATCH

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"CAN the hands of a watch be employed to denote direction with the use of the sun?

"Yes, approximate direction. If you hold the face of your watch level the axle in the centre will indicate the vertical, or the direction of the zenith. Then turn the figure "12" toward the sun when it is exactly noon (local noon, not standard time, unless you happen to live on a standard meridian). The direction in which the "12" lies will, of course, indicate south.

At the same time, the figure "2" will indicate west, the figure "6" north, and and the figure "10" east. Also, "1:30" will indicate the direction southwest, "10:30" southeast, "4:30" northwest, and "7:30" northeast.

You can also use the position of the sun to determine roughly the points of the compass. In this case, however, the results are varied both by the time of the year and the latitude of the observer. At and in the neighborhood of the equinoxes (March 20 and September 23) the sun does rise almost exactly in the east at 6 o'clock a. m. and set almost exactly in the west at 6 o'clock p. m., everywhere, without regard to differences of latitude. Also, everywhere, and at all times the sun is south at local noon.

But a difference of latitude always makes a difference in the time when the sun is in line with the intermediate points of the compass. Let us take, as a fair medium latitude, giving results not very far wrong for any part of the United States, the parallel of 40 degrees N. Then at, or not very far from, the equinoxes, the sun will be east at about 6 a. m.; southeast about 9:45 a. m.; south at noon; southwest about 2:15 p. m.; west (setting) about 6 p. m.

But after the spring equinox (March 20), the sun begins to rise and set more and more northward from the east and west points.

Going forward to the Autumn equinox (September 22) we find the situation of things identical with that of the Spring equinox, the rising and setting of the sun occurring everywhere east and west at 6 o'clock a. m. and p. m., respectively, and the intermediate positions being the same as before.

But after the Autumn equinox the sun begins to decline more and more below, or to the south of, the equator. At the Winter solstice (December 22) it attains its greatest southern declination. At about that time of year, then, let us see what its times and directions are at various hours of the day.

It rises nearly south-east by-east about 7:30 a. m. It never reaches east at all, both the east and west points lying far north of the intersections of its apparent path with the horizon. At about 8:40 a. m. it lies south-east; at noon it is south; about 3:20 p. m. it is south-west; and about 4:40 p. m. it is nearly south-west-by-west (setting).

Lift Out Your Corns

ICE-MINT

THE NEW DISCOVERY ENDS ALL

Foot Troubles

This new discovery, made from a Japanese product, is certainly a wonder the way it draws out inflammation from a pair of swollen, burning, aching feet. It takes the soreness right out, then the corn or callous shrivels and lifts off.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between toes, just shrivel up and lift off so easy. It is wonderful. Just think! Not one bit of pain while applying Ice-mint or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

You will never have to cut a corn again and run the risk of blood poison. Say good-by to your old corn salve, plasters and bandling toe rot, that put corns of yours is sure to be a "goner" if it ever feels the magic touch of Ice-mint. It imparts such a delightful, soothing, cooling feeling to the feet that you will sigh with relief.

Ice-mint is the real Japanese secret for fine, healthy little feet. It makes foot odors and keeps them sweet and comfortable. It is greatly appreciated by women who wear high heel shoes, and by men who have to stand on their feet all day.

Just ask in any drug store for a little Ice-mint and give your poor, suffering, tired, swollen feet the treat of their lives. It costs little and there is nothing better.

ROMANCE OF JEWELS

—By Barbara Bayne—

THE MISSING "SHAH" DIAMOND.

MOST famous stones of royal regalia have had curious and romantic adventures. There is the "Shah," for instance. The Prince Chosroes of Persia, a younger son of Abbas Mirza, but who, on account of his mother's royal birth, succeeded his father, visited the Russian court in 1813 and brought as a present to the Emperor Nicholas I. a diamond of fine quality, perfectly cut and free from blemishes, in the form of an irregular prism, weighing about ninety-five carats.

Though probably the loot of some ancient temple, its early history is unknown. On three of the edges which were clean-cut planes, indicating that its original size had been much larger, were engraved the name of three Persian rulers.

When the Persian, in 1814, began to rule Persia in European fashion, he got into difficulties with Russia, and was at war with that country from 1821 to 1823. Three years later a treaty of peace was finally made and Persia was forced to cede some territory to Russia.

Meanwhile, as if Russia desired to obliterate all sentimental interest attached to the Persian diamond, it was cut to eighty-six karats and the engraved inscriptions were taken out in the process.

The "Shah" was with the Russian crown jewels at the downfall of the Empire. A rare ruby-red diamond, weighing only ten karats, but said to have cost the Emperor Paul 100,000 rubles, was also amongst the Russian crown jewels.

The "Polar Star," a brilliant of forty karats, was variously reported to be in the Russian treasury to belong to the Princess Youssoupoff.

TELL THESE AT DINNER

Grimsley: "I understand that Miss Wade married a man who made a big fortune by a lucky speculation." Dodds: "Yes, and he disgraced her while they were on their honeymoon." Grimsley: "How did he do it?" Dodds: "She wanted the other passengers to think an ocean voyage was an old story to them, so when her husband, almost as soon as they were on board, pointed to a row of lifebuoys, and asked the captain what was the idea of all the extra tires."

The guest had outstayed her welcome. In fact, the hostess was in despair, and began to think she would never have her house to herself again. She decided to drop a gentle hint. "Don't your husband and children miss you dreadfully?" she asked. "Yes. How kind of you to think of it!" said the delighted guest. "I'll send for them at once."

FOXY GRANDPA STORY

HOW LASSIE WENT SHOPPING

YES, indeed, dogs are smart. children. I knew an airedale once called Lassie who acted pretty much as you would expect a young lady to act.

I had a friend who kept a sporting goods store where he sold all kinds of tennis racquets, skates, footballs and baseballs. I often used to stop in to visit with him for a while, and enjoy seeing the customers come in to make their purchases.

One day while I was waiting there, a young man came in with a fine airedale trotting behind him. The young man wanted to buy a tennis racquet. On the counter, with the tennis racquets, were a lot of balls. Now, as you know, dogs love to play with a ball. The dog sat down and looked up at the shopkeeper and barked.

"Bow-wow!" with such a pleading look in her eyes that he couldn't help but notice her.

The young man who owned the airedale said:

"Be quiet, Lassie. Wait until you get home, then you can play with your own ball."

But Lassie kept barking:

"Bow-wow-wow!"

The shopkeeper, who was a kind-hearted man and loved animals, picked up a cheap ball and threw it to Lassie who caught it in her mouth. Then she jumped around and barked with joy as if to say: "Thank you."

The young man made his purchase, thanked the man and he and Lassie went out of the store.

My friend, the shopkeeper, told me that several times during the Summer his screen doors had opened and into the shop walked Lassie all by herself.

She would walk right over to the counter where the balls were kept, jump up on her hind feet and bark at the man, wiggling her short stump of a tail as fast as she could.

Of course this pleased the man very much, and he always hanned over and patted Lassie affectionately. Lassie couldn't speak, but the way she acted and the expression in her eyes were enough to say:

"Please give me another ball."

And this this kind shopkeeper did several times during the Summer.

Winter came and the baseballs were put away. Whether or not Lassie knew that Winter was not the season to play with baseballs, the proprietor of the sporting goods store put up a great big baseball in the window to let them know that he had some fine new baseballs for sale.

Imagine his surprise shortly after this when Lassie walked into the store. She lived in the neighborhood and had seen the big baseball in the window. This reminded her of her kind friend who had given her the balls the Summer before, and in she pranced.

Did she get another ball? She certainly did, and barked "thank you" and ran out, the happiest dog in town.

The table has elaborately carved legs which harmonize with the typical Adam design of the mirror frame. The polychrome candlesticks have divided bases which carry out the design of the table ends. The table and mirror frame are of mahogany. The candle shades are of silk, with satin ornamentation.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Wrap a piece of ordinary crepe over a soft wool shawl and use it for brushing velvet gowns or cloaks. It is more effective than the ordinary soft brush.

Rice water or a little borax dissolved in boiling water is better than starch for stiffening voiles, cotton georgette, fine lisse or lace collars. A weak solution of gum arabic should be used for giving a slight stiffness to silk and materials of a crepe-like texture. For cretonne, figured cotton or linen, a little stiff rice water should be used.

Mutton fat should be kept entirely apart from all other fats, as it is used for special purposes, such as bottling, hermetically sealing jars of jam, sauces and pastes, and also for boots and shoes. Mutton fat is much harder than any other and has the quality of being waterless.

THE FOLKS OUT FRONT

AN OPEN MIND AS A REAL ASSET

By Beatrice Fairfax,

Who Occupies a Unique Position in the Writing World as an Authority on the Problems of Girls.

NOT so long ago a well-known author had his first play produced. In one scene there was a wall hung with pictures. When the author came to rehearsal he found that not a single picture had glass over it. Haughtily he summoned the stage manager and insisted that this be attended to at once.

"Nothing to do, sir," explained the canny old stagehand. "If there's glass on those pictures and there's going to be an ugly reflection when the lights hit 'em. And all the folks in the front rows are going to sit there seeing their reflections in the glass. You have to set the stage so it will produce the impression of being a real room. And you got to allow a lot for how it's going to look to the folks out front."

The author protested. Didn't he know more about how he wanted the "set" to look than any mere stage-manager could—hadn't he written the play—wasn't his knowledge of the scene he wanted depicted superior to that of a mere utility man?

But the stage manager stood firm. He knew his game. He knew how to get effects. And with the backing of the manager and the director and the producer, he won out. But to this day the author fancies the failure of his play can be attributed in part to his being overruled in many points of stage-setting.

Are you one of those folks who break into a new business conducted by some one with the old hands how they ought to run it?

Don't forget that all through life there are two viewpoints possible—yours from where you stand and that of the "folks out front" who have a perspective far different from yours. Often see things under a different "lighting" from that where you stand. The real truth about any situation—or the true reflection of any condition—is difficult to find unless you move about and get a perspective on things. Make sure that you have seen a subject from every angle. Try to allow for the technical knowledge and experience of those with whom you deal. And when it comes to the minor details of a job you have got 'em mastered, don't stubbornly insist on having your own way. Recognize that the bigger value you can get from any situation is to see the truth about it and that an open mind will enable you to learn from the stage carpenters and audiences of life.

WHAT about your shades? Don't forget it costs a very little more to have new shades at the windows and new—how it does freshen things up! The room looks brighter, the curtains whiter. New window shades give a "finish", a touch of real distinction that few other things can give.

But the best shades will prove abject failures in giving service unless they are mounted on quality rollers. And the American Hardware Line shows there is only one quality roller—HARTSHORN!

Hartshorn SHADE ROLLERS AND WINDOW SHADE FABRICS Established 1860

Hartshorn Shade Rollers do not jam, slide, slip or fall. They are always ready to perform perfect shade service at all times. Once your room is equipped with shades on Hartshorn Rollers, you can forget this important yet little-thought-of part of a room's appointments.

Specify "HARTSHORN" on your Shades.

THE WAYS OF A HUSBAND—By ANN LISLE

Continuing the Interesting and Intensely Human Adventures of Anne and Jim

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Jim and Anne find happiness again on a honeymoon spent in the apartment of Betty Winston, loaned for the occasion. They go to Dreamwold for a Sunday dinner with Jeanie and are met in the grounds by Rosa, who ignores Anne. Rosa advises the discharge of Mabel Storrs to save the big salary. This Anne resents. Evvy helps Anne arrange her apartments and a dinner is given as a housewarming.

By Ann Lisle

"ANNE, I realize I've got to handle Rosa alone. There's no question that you two can't get along together. You antagonize each other beyond any hope of making you friends even on the surface——"

"Then she is my enemy! She's declared it openly," I cried.

Jim shook his head.

"I was only in the office for a few minutes and I didn't have time for more than a half dozen sentences with her. But I found out you'd been defending Mabel and antagonizing Rosa again. For a minute after I came to that unmistakable conclusion I saw red. I confess my first idea was that you were ruining all my plans through sheer stubbornness——"

"Oh, Jim, not that!" I begged. "I did row with Rosa unmercifully. I couldn't help it. I made her hate me. But I think that makes her all the more amused or delighted or whatever it is she thinks it is to be friends with you."

"Now you've come to the point," said Jim, smiling grimly.

"It's too late for me to make any friendly advances now," I said thoughtfully.

"It certainly is, my dear," Jim answered firmly. "I've told Rosa that you aren't ready to do any entertaining. I've got to stick to that story for the present anyway. It's hard enough for me to follow your change of moods without asking Rosa to figure you out."

"It isn't moods!" I cried. "It's just that I'm beginning to see what I owe the living!"

"Let's not discuss what you owe—any one," said Jim coldly. "I might say a few things I'd be sorry for later. But since you're ready to be practical, what do you say to our going to a show tonight?"

"Why, Jim," I said, trying to adjust myself to his rapid strides. "I hadn't thought of theatre—or anything like that."

"Don't preach," he flung out in a sudden gust of irritation. "Didn't you say you were going to stand up with Carlotta at her wedding? Well, that lets you out of this pose of dull formality"——

"I didn't know you heard me when I said I was to be the maid of honor," I gasped.

"You don't put much over on James," he replied complacently. "Of course, if you care more for Carlotta or your dead stepfather than you do for your husband, we'll say nothing more."

"I'll go with you, dear," I cried. "I thought you understood my feelings all along. I'm not in the mood for celebrating. But Carlotta needs me. She has no other intimate friends. At the biggest moment in her life, I have to stand by, don't I? But I'll be consistent——"

"Let's forget it," he replied grumpily. "Time enough to whine when I'm hurt. I've been telling you all evening that you've put me in a position where Rosa has the whip hand. Now let's go out to a show and forget it."

Phoebe Better

One morning shortly after Carlotta and Tony had announced their engagement Neal telephoned me the pleasant tidings that Phoebe was feeling so much better he'd been able to bring her back to the city.

"And my Phoebekins is bankering to see you," he added. "So I'm looking you for dinner tonight whether or no you and Jim have another engagement."

"We haven't," I answered. "You know I'm not in the mood to do much society."

"Mustn't be morbid, Babbs," counseled Neal gaily. "I know what's in your mind, but it isn't good business to force Jim into mourning or to let yourself make any outward show of it."

"I'm going to be Carlotta's matron of honor," I announced, imbued by Neal's gravity to protest against the charge of making myself deliberately miserable.

"And I'll bet Jim jumped at it when you told him," laughed Neal. "I know you'll be consistent and tired around with Jimmie when he wishes you to. Want to tell me to shut up and mind my own business?"

Neal and I ended our conversation with a bit of pleasant chaffing, and then I plunged into a day of work, and interrupted at noon for a sandwich and glass of milk which I combined with a phone call to Phoebe. At six o'clock I was on the point of closing my desk and getting ready to go to Phoebe's when my door opened and Miss May came in.

"Mrs. Harmon, Mr. Rockhill's here in a state of agitation," she announced.

"It's hard to think of the pompous and self-satisfied Mr. Rockhill permitting himself to become agitated," I replied idly. "In his gardenia wilted, or is there something we can do, such as get the papers to leave the sausage advertisement out of the page on which his ad appears?"

"You might stay and go into it with him," answered Miss May with great precision.

"Betty's gone and there's no one else to handle him. He's really in a terrible state. And I thought if you could get him into your office here before Mr. Hoadley comes for me, it would make all the difference"——

She stopped abruptly and began twirling her foot with the funny awkwardness of a self-conscious child.

"Have you an engagement with Mr. Hoadley this evening?" I asked, keeping any suggestion of banter out of my voice.

"I can't put him off. I don't want Mr. Rockhill to know. I'm sure you're a good enough friend"—she choked out blindly and whisked herself out of my office as amazingly as she'd whirled in.

In another second the self-satisfied president of the Yelda Company was boring over my hand with the supercilious grace which make me so ill at ease. His eyes hit mine in a series of grievances. Park was buying too heavily down in South America.

He was laying in a stock that wasn't salable unless a heavy advertising campaign made it so. And he was spending so fast that a quick turnover was necessary or else there wouldn't be a chance to weather his insane purchasing.

Mr. Rockhill plunged me into a maelstrom of suggestions. I realized he was frightened out of his usual composure and he was heading toward as mad an orgy of publicity as Park's whirl of purchasing. So I gave myself to the task of thinking clearly and saving as much of the situation as I could control.

A Long Session

We mapped out skeleton advs. We discussed the best media for getting them over to the public quickly. We planned a sales campaign.

Vaguely I realized that I was hungry. I was acutely conscious of a headache. But I went on trying to stem the current of Mr. Rockhill's sudden dangerous activity. We worked on without cessation for a long time. How long it was I didn't dream, until he suddenly pulled out his watch and gave a cry of astonishment.

"It's ten minutes to eight! We really must call a halt. I think we've done enough for tonight anyway," he ejaculated.

I held myself in leash until he had departed without any apology for trespassing so late on my time. Then I seized the telephone, bent on calling Phoebe's apartments and explaining the delay which must have worried and annoyed them so. But I couldn't get Central.

After a minute or two of jiggling the receiver hook up and down to no purpose, I realized that my telephone was out of order, and that I'd have to send my message from the corner drug store. So I got into my hat and coat, straightened things up a bit for the night, and after locking the place, hurried down the creaking stairs to the street.

Just as I got to the entrance of the building, a taxi drew up to discharge a passenger. Without stopping to think of anything but this providential means of getting to Phoebe's quickly, I hailed the car and got in.

As soon as we were off I realized that I should have stopped to telephone. But I was so tired from overwork and so hungry that I couldn't rouse myself.

But, as sudden as a strained rubber band sometimes gives way, my mood of quietude snapped. I found myself abruptly as nervous as a cat. I felt like a bad child on its way to discipline. I was afraid I didn't want to get to Neal's and try to explain. I had an utter distaste for explaining.

And when I'd made the whole situation clear, how would Jim take it?

When I arrived at Phoebe's it was all of 8:30. My chagrin was greater than my annoyance at Mr. Rockhill for delaying me so late. I realized unhappily that I must have given my family a fright. And I knew that keeping folks waiting for dinner and then never showing up until such an hour as this couldn't help antagonizing them. Sorry as I was, I didn't feel guilty because the situation couldn't have been avoided. But when it was Neal who opened the door I felt a sense of relief.

Romeo and Juliet -:- The Old Story Up to Date -:- DRAWN BY POPINI

Copyright, 1923, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

PROBABLY never so long as the world whirls 'round will two families agree that Son is good enough for Daughter, or Daughter good enough for Son. Precisely as in the days of the Montagues and Capulets, every hour since then and probably each day in the years to come, will find one family—if not both families—objecting to the meeting lovers.

In this wing-ed age the old story is enacted time and time again. But Cupid wins with ease because she drives her motor to some field, perhaps half a hundred miles away, to meet him who flies down from the sky at the appointed instant.

There's another reversal in the fact that, unlike the old days and ways when she loaned down from the balcony, he now must lean from his airplane to clasp HER in his arms.

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

"Critics are like brushers of noblemen's clothes."

Critics never were popular, not even in Sir Henry Wotton's time, for Henry wrote the above in one of his pamphlets.

"All me eye and Betty Martin."

An old seafaring expression founded on the remark of an English sailor who stopped in on a religious service in France, and said he could understand nothing but "all me eye and Betty Martin."

"The devil to pay."

"The Devil" was a tavern in Fleet street, London, patronized by lawyers. When clients lost money in a suit they used to say it went to pay "The Devil" for the lawyer's drinks. Gradually the expression took the form now so common.

"The guard dies, but never surrenders."

These words are attributed to Cambronne after the battle of Waterloo, and were widely quoted by French writers.

HOW TO SLOW DOWN

By BRICE BELDEN, M. D.

OLD age may be long deferred if the mental faculties remain in a state of vigor through use.

Being in comfortable financial circumstances as one grows older may prove to be a misfortune. It is a mistake to give up one's physical and mental labors in such circumstances.

Too much mental and physical relaxation spells decay and deterioration. There must be a slackening up of physical exertion and nerve strain as age increases. Moderation must be the keynote. Permitting the faculties to stagnate would be excess in a sense, and excess is always undesirable from a medical standpoint.

It is well also to bear in mind relaxion spells decay and debrain under normal conditions is a form of exercise, so that an individual so using his brain may require less physical exercise than he otherwise would and may also need a liberal amount of food in order to maintain proper physiological equilibrium.

This will make clear why it is unwise suddenly to give up both mental and physical exercise, for such a change will prove a shock to one's entire organization. There is sure to be a case of "sweet bells out of tune." If an individual does not know how to adjust in such circumstances he is in for trouble.

To settle down suddenly to a life of physical and mental ease means to approach a condition where the strain on some important link in the physical chain becomes greatly intensified, unless the food ration is so reduced as barely to support life.

NOT GRAVITATION

Gravitation had nothing to do with attracting these people to each other. If "her" hair had been stringy, lusterless and unsightly they might still be strangers. The need of saving the hair and making it attractive is fundamental. The only question is —What to use?" and the safest answer is

Newbro's Herpicide

It's twenty-five year old reputation as a saver and beautifier of the hair is absolutely unsurpassed. Why handicap yourself with dull, brittle and unsightly hair when genuine Newbro's Herpicide is sold at all drug counters? Satisfaction absolutely guaranteed. Begin its use today.

Send ten cents in stamps or coin for the new pamphlet. Address The Herpicide Co., Dept. K, Detroit, Mich.

Poverty—the Great Curse

Poverty Is Slavery. Fight It

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Young men, and old men, fight poverty as you would fight slavery. Ask the old, and they will tell you that poverty is the great, widespread curse.

Not wealth is necessary to happiness, but freedom from poverty that grinds, poverty that worries, poverty that makes a man the slave of any man who has a dollar—THAT is necessary to happiness.

You have seen pictures of slave-traders rushing through the African forests and poor blacks fleeing before them.

What the slave-catcher was to the black man on the Gold Coast, poverty is to you today.

If you are young, if the dollars slip through your fingers, and you feel that the future will take care of itself, think about it for a while.

The grasping hand of poverty is above every man; every man lives in danger of this powerful clutch unless he has regulated his life with wisdom—and actually lives today in such a way as will make it impossible for poverty's grip to seize him.

The word "mortgage," which means "a death pledge," is a curse upon many homes and many lives. It makes men, women and children homeless. It turns old age into the streets. It is merciless and cruel as in the old, primitive times, when death itself could be made the penalty for failure to pay the death pledge.

Death in thousands of cases would be more merciful, less painful, than the mortgage against which men fight year after year, paying out interest, struggling, hoping, and at last giving in.

Keep out of poverty—keep out of debt.

The dollar you spend so quickly today, the other dollar tomorrow, and the day after, might mean later independent manhood, power to control you time, direct your career.

Money enough—though it be but ten cents a day more than you spend—means freedom, independence, the right to look any man in the eye as his equal.

And poverty, debt, the spending of ever so little more than you actually have, means slavery now, anxiety, humiliation in the future.

POVERTY DEPRIVES CHILDREN OF EDUCATION—AND SO IT MEANS IGNORANCE.

POVERTY DEPRIVES CHILDREN OF CARE AND GOOD FOOD—AND SO IT MEANS DISEASE.

POVERTY TAKES AWAY MEN'S COURAGE, DRIVES THEM TO DESPAIR, MAKES THEM SEEK RELIEF WHEREVER IT CAN BE FOUND—AND SO POVERTY MEANS DRUNKENNESS.

Wherever you find men miserable, poor and underpaid you will find ignorance and drunkenness.

Wherever you better conditions and lift the weight of poverty, drunkenness and ignorance diminish.

Whatever your age, habits, or condition, there are two things you can do—better yourself, or make things worse.

It is absolutely in your power to make your life dignified, independent and satisfied.

However old you may be, or discouraged, it isn't too late to fight against the curse that weighs on millions, the curse of present poverty, and that other curse, almost as great, DREAD OF POVERTY in the future.

It is in your power to be free if you will. Spend less than you make, and you will find that spending less means, in almost every case, earning more.

If a man puts into learning and thinking the hours and vitality formerly devoted to frivolous spending, he will soon find his power to earn increased.

It isn't easy to save and be independent. If it were everyone would be independent. But it is possible to keep poverty away.

It is possible to be a free man, afraid of no one, controlled and bossed by nobody.

Few live happy, independent—a great majority live with this pair of hands always above them, in fear of the future, pinched and anxious in the present.

But you can be free if you will. It is in your power to say to yourself: "I may not be rich, but I shall never be poor. I'll earn all that I can in the present, and I'll save so much of every dollar for the days that are to come."

You would have a poor opinion of the savage on the Gold Coast if you found him, when the slave drivers were abroad, thinking of anything except escape from those hunters.

Yet we are all of us here with the slave-hunter of the future among us.

Ninety-nine out of a hundred know what poverty means, but ignore the knowledge.

They know that if they cannot save and begin to get ahead today there is no earthly reason why they should hope to do that at a later day—yet they ignore that knowledge.

And of those that read this many will feel the grip of the big hands of poverty—don't let the hands grip YOU.

New England Agriculture

The United States Department of Agriculture, from its headquarters in Wakefield, has issued a bulletin on New England agriculture.

Among other things, it says:

Scarcity of farm labor and high wages are accelerating the shifting from unprofitable into more profitable lines of farming. Farmers must utilize their own aid and the services of their families more fully. Machinery, teams and help must be used more fully and efficiently, and management of the farm business must be better.

It is only a business man who goes into farming as a sideline who can appreciate the importance of business methods in farming.

Farming is rather a complicated business when done efficiently. It needs a great deal of thought, order and judgment. A good and successful farmer is primarily a good and successful business man. The fertile farm is only to a farmer what sufficient capital is to a business man; and a poor, shiftless business man wastes his capital just as the poor, shiftless farmer wastes the fertility of his soil.

Our agricultural colleges and our Department of Agriculture are doing a great deal to bring business and thought and intelligence to bear upon the problems of agriculture.

It might be well to compel the country boy, and perhaps all boys, to take a course in an agricultural college just as we make him take a course in general education.

DOG KISSES LEAD TO DISEASE

PARIS, May 16.—"Kyste Hydatic, a common disease, but one almost unknown to the general public by name, is caused by dog kisses, according to Drs. J. Bertrand and G. Medakowitch, who lectured on the matter before the Anatomical Society of France.

Dogs' tongues, said the doctors, frequently are carriers of an invisible microbe which causes an infection resembling cancer of the brain. Jackals and wolves are also subject to the disease.

No dog owner should permit his pet to lick his hands or face in attempts to show his friendliness, say the professors.

"Flower Day"

Editor Boston American:

Some years ago, as a small boy, I came to Boston with my mother from a town in the western part of the State, to visit a patient at the Massachusetts General Hospital. We had brought from home several bouquets of flowers. As we walked from the North Station to the Hospital a great many children playing in the streets followed us asking for a flower.

Recently I was reminded of this event, and the thought came to me that much pleasure would be given the people in the poorer sections of the city if, on a specified day during the Summer, flowers could be distributed by automobiles in the same way as toys are distributed by the Post Santa.

With the thousands of people who commute to Boston, it should be possible to have brought in on a given day a great many bouquets of flowers picked in the gardens of the commuters. These flowers could be deposited at the North and South Stations and in the subway stations. They could then be distributed by automobiles. In this way much happiness would be brought to many children and grown-ups who seldom have an opportunity to obtain flowers. A day could be set aside each Summer and designated as the "Boston American Flower Day."

Do you feel that such a plan is practical?

JOHN WATERS.

Registrar, College of Business Administration, B. U.

Why not just "Flower Day"?—Ed.

Pleads for Brother

Editor Helping Hand:

My brother has been sick abed all Winter and has not been able to care for and clothe his children as they ought to be. He has four children, two girls, one seven years old and the other nineteen months old, and two boys, three and five. In addition they expect another baby very soon, and they haven't anything ready except a couple of little shirts which I happened to be able to get for them. Anything in the way of clothes for these children would be greatly appreciated.

MRS. F. C. P.

For Mrs. J. M. H. M.

Editor Helping Hand:

Will you please send me the address of Mrs. J. M. H. M. as I should like to assist in some small way.

MRS. A. B. M.

ED. NOTE—Thank you. The address will be sent you.

Boots to Give

Editor Helping Hand:

Please send C. H. W.'s address. I have boots size 10½ which I will send parcel post. L. L. W.

ED. NOTE—Thank you. His address will be sent you.

Has Baby Carriage

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a large quantity of baby clothes up to two years which I will give to any needy mothers who will call. I also have a baby carriage.

MRS. A. M.

ED. NOTE—We have many calls for both. You offer will be forwarded to Mrs. E. K., who has two babies, one eighteen months and one six weeks old, to Mrs. S. K., who has a baby two years old, and to Mrs. J. C., who is in need of a carriage in which to take out her baby who is just recovering from the whooping cough. Many thanks.

Children's Clothes Wanted

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a mother of two children that I have to support alone. The children and myself need clothes very much. The children are four months and three years. I wear size 36. Anything in the line of clothes will be appreciated.

MRS. M. C. 2.

To Make Over

Editor Helping Hand:

I have several things that Mrs. K. G. B. could use for her girls, and if she sews, more could be sent her to make over. I would also like Mrs. J. M. H. M.'s address.

MRS. R. J. W.

ED. NOTE—Both addresses will be sent you. Thank you.

Sheets and Curtains

Editor Helping Hand:

Will you please send me the name and address of Mrs. G. E. D. whose letter asking for sheets and curtains appeared in the Boston American? I have some I think she could use. E. G. M.

ED. NOTE—Many thanks. Her address will be sent you.

Will Help Both

Editor Helping Hand:

Please send me the address of these two parties as I can help them both.

ED. NOTE—Many thanks. You will be sent the addresses of Mrs. J. M. H. M. and Mrs. J. A.

Widow Helps Widow

Editor Helping Hand:

Please send me the address of Mrs. J. H. H. M., the widow of seventy, who wishes pieces to braid into rugs. Another widow the same age would be much pleased to send her some.

I. D. H.

ED. NOTE—Seems very appropriate and all. Her address will be sent you. Thank you.

Cape and Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

Thank you for Mae's address. In tonight's paper Mrs. E. M. asks for a light cape and some baby clothes. I have a cape she may have and a few things for a baby, also. Please send me her address.

MRS. M. H.

ED. NOTE—It was Mrs. E. M. S, who asked for the baby clothes. The figure, incidentally, does not mean that she has asked for help before, but simply that we have published letters from two other women who happened to have the same initials. Her address will be sent you. Thank you.

Helping Hand Broadcasted

Editor Helping Hand:

Enclosed is a list of clothing which I will be glad to give. I would also like the address of anyone who makes rugs, as I have a big bundle of woolens for that PURPOSE. All those articles are already packed to send. I would like early replies, as we are going away soon. I will have more things in a few weeks. My heart bleeds when I read the Helping Hand.

I thought that everyone in the U. S. reads the Helping Hand, but I got fooled. A lot of my friends never heard of it. So every night I clip out the entire column and mail it to someone without signature. Don't you think it a good idea?

MRS. E. N. L.

ED. NOTE—It's a splendid idea, and you deserve the best of thanks. Also for the fine list, and especially the three shirts you bought just to top off the bundle of baby clothes. You will be sent the address of Mrs. A. McC., who expects a baby soon and has a girl three who could wear the four-year-old dresses. Also of Mrs. E. A. M., who needs clothes for a girl of twelve. Mrs. J. M. H. M. has been plentifully supplied with rag rug material, so we will hold that part of your offer.

Badly in Need

Editor Helping Hand:

I am badly in need of clothes for myself and three girls. I am a widow and find it very hard to get the very necessary little things, so that I cant buy clothes. I would appreciate anything I could make over for girls nineteen, fourteen and eleven. I take size 38 in dresses and 6 in shoes. If there is anything I can do in return I will gladly do it.

THE BIG GOBBLERS STILL PECK WHERE THEY PLEASE

By Herbert Kaufman

ONCE more Senator Borah inflicts embarrassment on his party. No administration can rubber-stamp that man.

This time he points out how reluctant Washington is to enforce the Sherman act. Even amateur observers can see that the Department of Justice is choosing anti-trust cases with a wary hand.

True, such piking prosperity raiders as the pine lumber combine and sanitary earthenware manufacturers are more or less in Federal coils, but all the big gobblers are still pecking where they please.

There's not a wrinkle of worry on a single Standard Oil dividend. Old King Coal winks to the powers that be and plays bandit to the end, and sugar pirates evidence no sign of striking the black flag.

The gentleman from Idaho acknowledges that our only apparent recourse against groups of prey is continued self-denial.

What a proud picture of democracy! How a government "of, for and by the people," succeeds in protecting their rights!

The Soviets may be making a mess of it in most other respects, but Moscow does contrive to keep prices down. Firing squads work wonders for living costs. Russia, at least, has no gougers and market manipulators.

The next successful presidential candidate will have to put spanks as well as planks in his platform.

Too Much Hay Making

Union pots and capital kettles reciprocally inform the country how black the others are.

New York painters, decorators and paperhangers threaten to quit the job if they don't instantly get higher pay and fewer hours.

Their secretary urges acceptance of present propositions before an upward revision.

Michael J. Colleran, president of the Manhattan Building Trades Council, ridicules the notion of beating down wages by curtailed construction and points out that nation-wide demand for their services will start an exodus of skilled workers from the metropolis if owners and contractors carry out their punitive program.

Real estate experts call for a halt in the careless financing of projects.

When the housing shortage is relieved properties erected at current overheads won't be profitable, and therefore can't long meet interest and income expectations.

The dollar protests against the hammer's greed, and both level accusing fingers at material men whose persistent and indefensible charges indicate determination to make entirely too much hay while emergency's sun is shining.

Nobody seems to give a tinker's dam for the general public, out of whose pocket the losses and extortions must be finally met.

The Way They Play the Game

Public pockets twinge with further pains at Belgium's attempted repudiation of 450 odd millions borrowed from the United States.

We are informed that Mr. Wilson forgave the debt. Unadulterated bosh! There isn't a Cabinet on earth that doesn't realize he hadn't cancellation authority, wouldn't be fool enough to assume it, and could only present his own views and recommendations for congressional guidance.

He made a suggestion to proper committees, they turned it down, and so the incident rests.

Brussels knows the facts of the case and simply tempts the utter alienation of local friendship, when responsible officials pretend otherwise.

A few more exhibitions of stupidity and impertinence will convince the most obdurate league advocate or world court proponent that Europe is only reaching hands across the seas to get them into the Treasury.

Majority opinion is not so much opposed to the international game as the way they play it over there.

The deck's all right, but we can't trust diplomacy's card-marking.

The Game We Play

A statement of expenditures to date from the Rockefeller Foundation proclaims how we play the game over here.

Twenty-two millions alone for war relief and half of that amount for Red Cross doles, besides a million dollars for Herbert Hoover's child-feeding stations—ten-million-dollar medical college for China, over four millions to establish a medical centre in London and vasts gifts to Canadian, French and Belgian institutions. South America, Western and Central Europe, the Philippines, even Siam, are co-beneficiaries with our own universities and hospitals.

No other land can celebrate comparable philanthropies.

Our wealths are at the service of universal charity—messengers of world-spread mercy.

And older civilizations repay this unstinted generosity and unspared sacrifice with bitter criticism of our self-determination, thrust Shylock's scales upon us, and if Senator Moses speaks truth, hold our citizens in contempt and hatred.

Look Before You Leap Into Envy

Charles M. Pratt, secretary and treasurer of Standard Oil, betrays evidence of mental incompetence. Guardians are asked to administer his affairs. One more case of Midas. Sanity and health are beyond the reach of gold. A good appetite and a sound constitution, family happiness and the love of children can't be bought.

John D. Rockefeller hasn't had a real meal in decades. Look before you envy.

Charles B. Manville, eighty-nine years old and another industrial magnate, humiliatingly breaks into print at the "come-on" of a swindling crew. The evening of his life is marked with ridicule. Croesus always finds a due share of thorns in his rosebed.

The Maxwell mystery spreads to England. Nobody there knows anything about the reputed author of the already famous poison pen letters. And no one can estimate how many lordly homes are poisoned by a scandal, the extent of which has hardly begun to seep through print.

Asmodeus, of the X-ray eye, alone understands what anguish hides behind mansion fronts.

You're probably much luckier than a limited income may lead you to believe. Patent leathers don't hold more happy men than patched shoes.
